FROM H. BEVERLEY, Esq.,

Offg. Inspector-General of Jails, Bengal,

TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL,

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

Dated Alipore, the 1st October 1877.

SIR,

IN submitting my report on the administration of the prisons of Bengal for the year 1876, I regret that I have again to apologise for the delay that has occurred in its preparation. The cause of this is to be attributed to the pressure of work thrown upon all jail offices (1) by the extraordinary releases and remissions on the occasion of the Imperial Proclamation of 1st January last, and (2) by the introduction during the current year of the revised registers and returns prescribed by the new Jail Code. Some of the annual returns were not received in this office till the fifth or sixth month after the close of the year, and a larger proportion than usual had to be returned for correction. In consequence of this delay, I have ventured at times to refer to matters which have taken place since the close of the year.

I.—JUDICIAL RETURNS.

2. The following abstract shows the total number of prisoners of all classes that passed through the jails and lockups of Bengal during the year, and contrasts these figures with those for the previous year and for the four years from 1871 to 1874 :—

* This figure includes prisoners recaptured in the same year, the figures for the other years do not.

3. I have again to notice the discrepancy between the number of under-trial prisoners transferred and the number said to be admitted by transfer in the foregoing statement.

Discrepancy between the number of under-trial prisoners admitted and discharged by transfer.

These figures ought of course to be the same or nearly so. The great difference between them appears to be owing to carelessness in not distinguishing between under-trials admitted for the first time and those transferred to jails from Magistrates' hajuts or sub-divisional lockups. It is possible that the blame may not always rest with the jail authorities, inasmuch as, unless information to that effect is sent with the prisoners, it is impossible for the jailor to know whether or not they have been previously confined in a hajut or lockup, as the case may be. The result, however, is that some 2,000 under-trials are shown as admitted twice over, first in a hajut or lockup and then in a jail; and if this explanation is correct, the total number of under-trials admitted during the year, instead of exceeding the average of former years, in point of fact shows a decrease.

4. On the other hand, the number of convicts admitted to jail is larger than it has been in any year since 1866, with the exception of 1874, which was also a year of scarcity.

Increase in the number of convicts admitted.

1871 ...	27,999

The admissions of the past eleven years (excluding the jails now under the Assam Administration) are given in the margin. The increase in the year under report is believed to be due to the imprisonment of a greater number of bad characters under Chapter XXXVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The increase is most marked in the districts of Dinagepore, Bogra, Julpigoree, Mymensingh, Gya, Shahabad, and the Sonthal Pergunnahs. On the other hand, the districts of Burdwan, Beerbhoom, Midnapore, 24-Pergunnahs, Mozufferpore, Durbhunga, Sarun, and Manbhoom, show a considerable decrease in the number of imprisonments.

5. The number of convicts remaining in jails and lockups at the end of the year was 19,850. From the figures given in the margin it will be seen that while the number of convicts has been almost stationary for four years past, the total number of prisoners of all classes has increased by fifty per cent. within the last 17 years.

8. The number of offenders judicially sentenced to whipping during the year was 3,017, of whom 360 had been previously convicted. Of the total number only 87 were able to read and write. The number of stripes inflicted is shown in the following table :—

Of those flogged, 329 were under 16 years of age and 49 over 50. In 353 cases the offender was also sentenced to imprisonment as follows :—

The number of persons punished by fine only is reported to have been 66,370; but many of these were doubtless imprisoned in default of payment, and are therefore included in the number of admissions to jail during the year.

7. Of the prisoners admitted to jails during the year, 471 were under sixteen years of age, against 413 in 1875 and 535 in 1874. Some progress has been made towards opening the proposed Reformatory School at Alipore. A Board has been appointed, rules have been drawn up and approved, and the building has been made over to the Public Works Department for the necessary alterations. Some months must elapse, however, before the school can be certified under section 6 of the Act as fit for the reception of youthful offenders.

On the 31st December last there were 140 prisoners in jail under sixteen years of age, and no less than 437 over 60.

8. Of those admitted in district or central jails during the year, 3,534 are said to have been known thieves, dacoits, or robbers, 717 to be vagrants with no fixed residence, 3,729 to be suspicious characters, 595 to be habitual drunkards, 433 to be prostitutes, and 4,007 to be of good character. Of the others (20,167) nothing was known. The only crimes in which there was any increase or decrease worthy of remark were murder (for which 350 persons were imprisoned, against 276 in 1875) and culpable homicide, grievous hurt, &c., for which 626 persons were committed, against 573 in the previous year.

9. From statement IV it would seem that the ratio of re-convictions to the prison population (exclusive of those who served their sentences in lockups) was much the same as last year, being 12.30, against 12.22 in 1875. But the following table, giving the Re-convicted prisoners.

re-convictions among prisoners admitted to jails during the year, shows a considerable improvement upon the previous year, the proportion being 11·1 against 9·7 :—

* Received direct from lockups of the district.

The actual numbers of re-convictions during the last five years have been as follows :—

1872	...	1,377	1875	...	3,075
1873	...	1,695	1876	...	3,714
1874	...	2,757

This increase would seem to imply that greater attention has been paid both by magisterial and jail authorities to the registration of previous convictions. I am still unable, however, to accept the figures as accurate, and I have no doubt that as greater care is taken in ascertaining and communicating the fact of previous conviction, the proportion of re-convictions will be found to increase. At the same time a clear and authoritative definition seems to be needed of what should constitute a re-conviction for the purposes of this statement. At present every conviction is taken into consideration, without regard to the similarity of the offence, and a conviction is further interpreted to mean imprisonment in default of furnishing security for good behaviour.

10. In the foregoing table I have shown against each jail the number of persons imprisoned in default of furnishing such security, and it is interesting to contrast these figures with the number of re-convictions in the same jail. It will be seen that it is not always those districts in which the greatest number of bad characters are imprisoned that have the highest percentage of re-convictions.

The total number of persons committed to jail during the year in default of furnishing security for good behaviour was 3,401, against 2,130 in 1875, 1,368 in 1874, and 1,213 in 1873.

11. Of the 33,182 prisoners admitted to jails during the year, 21,812 were sentenced for periods not exceeding six months, and only 2,834 for terms exceeding two years. The following figures, taken in connection with the general increase in imprisonments, would seem to show that long sentences have been decreasing of late years:—

	1872.	1873.	1874.	1875.	1876.
Sentenced to terms exceeding three years	1,605	1,640	1,535	1,369	1,215
Ditto to transportation	277	287	253	303	417
Total	1,882	1,927	1,788	1,672	1,632

12. The average length of time for which prisoners were detained in jails while under trial was 16·77 days, against 15·41 days in 1875. In only three jails did the period exceed 30 days, viz. in Moorshedabad, Backergunge, and Singbhoom.

In lockups the average period of detention of prisoners under trial was 11·96 days, against 10·33. In the following lockups the period exceeded 15 days:—

Fenny	15·30	Buxar	21·37
Madareepore	16·48	Jungypore	22·20
Diamond Harbour	17·36	Ghatal	22·21
Sewan	17·84	Pakour	23·67
Bagdogra	18·83	Jamtara	25·20
Kishorgunge	20·53	Contai	30·21
Jamulpore	20·87	Bhubhooah	38·72

13. As regards convicted prisoners, the average period of detention in lockups was 7·44 days, against 8·05 in 1875. In the following lockups the average period exceeded 15 days:—

Tumlook	16·17	Shabazpore	20·32
Deoghur	18·93	Gobindpore	23·06
Pachumba	20·91	Bhubhooah	23·40
Palamow	47·72

The reason of the long period of detention in most of these lockups was explained in last year's report.

14. Statement VII shows that of those who came into jail during the year only 13·86 per cent. could read and write at all, and of those discharged during the year 14·17 per cent. The daily average under instruction was 1,313.

15. Of the under-trials imprisoned, 17,658 were convicted, 15,250 were acquitted, 26 escaped, and 58 died. Of the convicts undergoing imprisonment during the year, 37,358 were released, 27 escaped, 1,184 died, 814 were transported, and 66 were executed. The number of convicts released on appeal was 1,473, or 3·7 per cent. of the total number imprisoned on conviction. The districts in which these releases exceeded six per cent. were Bardwan (6·1), Patna (6·6), Bogra (6·8), and Chittagong (12·1).

Capital sentences.

16. The number of convicts who have suffered the extreme penalty of the law during the past twelve years are as follows:—

1865	... 66	1868	... 51	1871	... 65	1874	... 61
1866	... 50	1869	... 51	1872	... 59	1875	... 59

Of the prisoners released before expiry of sentence as a reward for good conduct or special service, one was Samuel Walker, who was rewarded with the remission of one year of his sentence for signal service on the occurrence of an outbreak in the Alipore jail in the year 1872, and four months for marks earned. The other was Ramlogan Bind, who had two years and two months remitted for general good conduct and signal service on the occasion of the émeute at Dehree in 1872.

Three prisoners, named Tara Hari, Himmud Shaik, and Diljan Shaik, were released from the Moorshedabad jail by the special order of Government on account of their having given information regarding several cases of dacoity which had taken place in the district. The first had 9 years and 25 days and the other two 6 years and 24 days unexpired out of original sentences of 10 years and 7 years respectively.

A female prisoner, about 50 years of age, named Mussamat Amirun alias Budhon, was released from the Gya jail by the special order of Government. She was sentenced to transportation for life on the 21st August 1841, and escaped from the Gya jail along with other prisoners during the disturbances of 1857-58. The other two prisoners, named Awoollah Shaik and Indur Sahoo, were released by order of Government on account of complete and incurable blindness. The first had 1 year 5 months and 25 days and the latter 1 year and 6 months of his sentence still to serve.

NOTE.—Besides the above there were two State prisoners in the Hazarobagh European Penitentiary during the year.

19. It will be seen that in several of the statements appended to this report (e.g. Nos. II, III, IV, VI, VII, and VIII) no statistics whatever are given as regards those prisoners who served out their sentences in lockups. This practice was sanctioned by Government resolution dated 22nd August 1871. But it should be borne in mind that to this extent the statements in question are incomplete. As a matter of fact, they have reference to those prisoners only who were confined in a district or central jail during the year. But, as will be seen from the calculation given below, some 5,300 prisoners over and above these served out their sentences in lockups. General deductions, therefore, drawn from these statements as regards the prison population of Bengal must be received with caution:—

Number of prisoners admitted to lockups during the year (I, column 5)	...	18,866
Deduct number transferred (column 8)	...	13,889
Number who served their sentence in lockups	...	5,477 nearly.*

* This figure does not accurately represent the number of those who served their sentences in lockups, as some of those remaining at the end of the year (249) would in due course be transferred to jails.

II.—JAIL ACCOMMODATION AND BUILDINGS.

20. At the end of 1876 the number of jails in Bengal was 49. Of these 39 were district jails, 5 (viz. Presidency, Alipore, Rajshahye, Hazareebagh, and Russa) were both district and central jails, 3 (viz. Midnapore, Buxar, and Bhagulpore) were central jails only, one was a sub-divisional jail (Baraset), and one a European Penitentiary. Since then the central and district jails at Midnapore have been amalgamated, and the district jail at Nya Doomka has been reduced to the status of a lockup. There are thus 47 jails at present, and the accommodation they provide is shown in the following table:—

	At 36 SUPERFICIAL FEET PER MAN WITHOUT REFERENCE TO CUBIC CONTENTS.		At 36 SUPERFICIAL AND 500 CUBIC FEET PER MAN.		At 36 SUPERFICIAL AND 648 CUBIC FEET PER MAN.
	Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.
Total accommodation ...	20,127	1,311	18,739	1,189	15,085	966
Less special accommodation for Europeans.	184	2	184	2	164	2
Balance ...	19,943	1,309	18,555	1,187	14,921	958

These figures refer to the sleeping accommodation for convicts only, exclusive of hospital and punishment cells. But as a certain number of convicts are always in hospital or cells, the actual available accommodation may be put at, say, five per cent. above these figures.

21. Prisoners sentenced for upwards of a year ought properly to be confined in a central jail. I propose, therefore, next to show what our central jail accommodation amounts to. The total accommodation provided by central, or district and central, jails is as follows:—

At 36 superficial feet per man without reference to cubic contents.		At 36 superficial and 500 cubic feet per man.		At 36 superficial and 648 cubic feet per man.
Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.
8,994	470	8,368	433	6,522	334

In those jails which are both district and central jails, of course a large number of prisoners are to be found who ought not strictly to be confined in a central jail. Thus on the 1st December last the number of prisoners in those jails with sentences not exceeding one year was as follows:—

			Belonging to the district.	Belonging to other districts.
Midnapore	138	13	(to relieve crowding at Balasore, &c.)
Presidency	254	40	(juveniles from Alipore, &c.)
Alipore	506	82	(adolescents from Calcutta, &c.)
Russa	20	27	(from Calcutta.)
Rajshahye	150	89	(from Maldah, Pubna, &c.)
Hazareebagh	112	40	(from Lohardugga)
Total	1,180	291

Deducting these figures from those given above, it follows that our present central jail accommodation (allowing 36 superficial and 500 cubic feet per prisoner) is sufficient for less than 7,000 males and about 400 females. This is not the allowance required by Rule 296 of the Jail Code, but it is that which has been practically observed for some years past in Bengal, and was considered by the recent Prison Conference to be sufficient.

22. Now on the 31st December last the total number of convicts in jails aggregated 18,933 males and 668 females, of whom those sentenced for terms not exceeding one year numbered 8,637 males and 362 females, leaving 10,296 males and 306 females who were sentenced for more than a year. It follows, therefore, that in order that all prisoners sentenced for more than a year may be confined in a central jail, our central jail accommodation must be largely increased. The available central jail accommodation, indeed, is hardly sufficient to provide for prisoners with sentences of upwards of two years. The number of such prisoners on the 31st December last was 6,856 males and 240 females; but in consequence of the insufficient size and insecurity of many of our district jails (e.g. Maldah, Pubna, Bogra, &c.) many prisoners with shorter terms have to be transferred elsewhere, and a central jail is often the only fit place to which they can be sent. Under these circumstances the Government has lately resolved to increase the central jail accommodation of Bengal, and has ordered the construction of a new central jail at Dacca. Meanwhile the rules on the subject have been so far modified that only prisoners sentenced for upwards of two years (except in the case of small district jails, from which all prisoners with sentences exceeding one year) will be transferred to central jails.

23. I now propose to inquire, in obedience to paragraph 9 of the resolution on last year's report, how far central jails have been reserved for the particular classes for whom they were constructed. On receipt of that resolution I collected statistics showing the number of prisoners in each jail with reference to the term of sentence and the district in which they were convicted; and to test the progress made, I called for similar figures in June last. The results are shown in the following table:—

	December 1876.	June 1877.	Difference.
Total number of convicts in jail	19,743	17,223	— 2,520
Number confined in district jails (excluding Europeans)	11,997	9,812	— 2,185
Ditto ditto in central jails (excluding Europeans)	7,623	7,392	— 331
Sentenced up to six months { In district jails	3,033	2,935	— 98
{ In central	871	540	— 331
Ditto ditto one year { In district	3,042	2,784	— 258
{ In central	1,020	753	— 278
Ditto ditto three years { In district	3,205	2,562	— 733
{ In central	2,308	2,137	— 261
Ditto over three years { In district	2,627	1,531	— 1,096
{ In central	3,328	3,862	+ 534

From this table it will be seen that of prisoners sentenced for terms not exceeding six months (who have no business in central jails at all, and who would not find their way there were it not that some of our central jails are also district jails) the number in central jails has been reduced by 331. Central jails also show a large comparative reduction in prisoners sentenced to one year, who should properly be confined in district jails. But as regards convicts with longer sentences, central jails show an increase of nearly 300, while the number in district jails has been reduced by 1,829. The number of long-term prisoners in district jails was still considerable in June last, several jails having neglected to carry out my orders directing their transfer to central jails; but these orders have since been enforced, and with the exception of some old and infirm prisoners, prisoners whose sentences will shortly expire, and prisoners retained as convict-overseers or trade-instructors, there are now very few long-term prisoners to be found in district jails. The tendency to retain these prisoners in district jails, as being more likely to repay the trouble spent in teaching them trades, is, however, so strong among jail superintendents generally that this subject will require close attention for some time to come; and I should recommend the continuance of half-yearly returns showing the number of long-term prisoners in each district jail and the reason of detention in each case. It is impossible altogether to blame a jail superintendent for pursuing a policy which alone, he believes, will make his jail manufactures remunerative; but if we take a broader view of the question, there is no doubt that convict labour can be made much more remunerative in central jails; and if this be an established fact, it is clear that in the long run it is more expedient for Government, on financial as well as other grounds, that all long-term prisoners should be collected in such jails.

24. The number of prisoners transferred during 1876 from one jail to another to undergo sentence was 4,593 males and 301 females; of these 2,741 males and 273 females were transferred to central jails; the remainder appear to have been mainly located in the Bankoora, Beerbhoom, Hooghly, Baraset, Dacca, Gya, Mozufferpore, and Purneah jails, to relieve overcrowding in other district jails. Owing to the releases of 1st January last and the stricter enforcement of the central jail system these transfers from one district jail to another have been much less frequent during the current year.

25. In last year's report the number of lockups (by which term is understood a subsidiary jail, generally at the headquarters of a sub-division, in which convicts as well as under-trials are confined) was stated to be 82. From that list Durbhunga now disappears, having been raised to the status of a district jail. The statements annexed to the present report, however, show four additional lockups, two new ones having been opened (1) at Fenny in the Noakholly district and (2) at Gopalgunge in Sarun, and the lockups at Pakour and Jamtara having been re-opened after being temporarily closed. The total number of lockups therefore at the end of the year was 85, of which 53 are reported to be either pukka buildings or to have pukka boundary walls, the remaining 32 being altogether kutcha structures.

A large number of lockups is, no doubt, necessary under the existing circumstances of the country; but their condition and management are at present so unsatisfactory, and at the same time so expensive, that I should be glad to see the number reduced to the lowest possible figure. In the majority of instances I have no hesitation whatever in saying that imprisonment in a lockup is virtually no punishment at all; yet these lockups cost no less than a lakh of rupees annually to maintain, and every prisoner confined in them costs at the rate of Rs. 106 per annum. It would perhaps be well if, instead of sentencing to short terms of imprisonment, sub-divisional courts could more frequently see their way to substitute the punishment of fine or whipping, in which case arrangements might perhaps be made to keep the under-trials at the police-station up to the time of conviction. But if this cannot be done, I am strongly of opinion that sentences of imprisonment at sub-divisions should be carried out in solitary cells and under much more rigorous conditions than at present.

A block of cells would not be nearly so expensive in the first instance as a pukka lockup, while three or four days' confinement in them would be quite as effectual a deterrent as imprisonment for fifteen days or a month in a lockup under present conditions, and the saving thus effected in the cost of maintenance would in a few years more than recoup the original outlay.

26. I regret to state that owing to financial exigencies not much was done during the year to improve the condition of jail buildings. The oldest province in India is still one of the most backward in respect of its prison accommodation. At least eight out of forty-three districts have no jail worthy of the name, the institution being represented by a cluster of rude huts constructed either of mud or of bamboo-matting and surrounded by a ramp of earth or a bamboo palisade. At least two other jails are wholly without pukka sleeping wards, while in several the limited pukka accommodation has to be supplemented by kutcha huts. Other jails require great alteration, if not entire reconstruction; some have been condemned on sanitary or other grounds, and their replacement by new structures has been ordered by Government. It must be many years therefore, before the jail buildings of Bengal can be said to be in an altogether satisfactory condition.

Improvements in jail buildings.

27. I append the usual detailed statement showing the amounts expended on jail buildings during the year by the Public Works Department. It will be seen that the new works were for the most part limited to the erection of workshops in the Midnapore central, Hazareebagh central, Bhagulpore central, and Dacca district jails; the construction of new pukka wards at Rajshahye and Jessore; the conversion of one of the old stud stables at Buxar into a convict barrack; and the manufacture of bricks for the new central jail at that place. During the current year the workshops and cells in the Hazareebagh jail have been pushed on; another pukka barrack has been constructed at Rajshahye; two other stud stables at Buxar have been converted into barracks, and the whole surrounded by a wall, which will, I trust, be completed before the end of the year. New barracks have also been sanctioned for Rungpore and Backergunge, and will be taken in hand at once, besides minor improvements to several of the existing district jails, for which carefully prepared projects have been approved and issued for execution.

Expenditure on jail buildings.

28. One change of some importance deserves mention here as having been inaugurated at the close of the year under report. With a view to utilize convict labour more freely in the construction of jail buildings, and to avoid the friction that too frequently occurs between the two departments when such works are executed by the Public Works officers, certain rules were drawn up by General Nicolls and myself providing for the execution of works by jail superintendents under the professional guidance of the Executive Engineer. Under these rules the preparation of the designs and estimates, as well as the responsibility for good workmanship, remains as before with the Public Works Department, but the work is actually carried out by the convicts under the immediate orders of the superintendent. In other words, the Executive Engineer tells the jail superintendent what to do and how to do it, and the jail superintendent sees that his convicts do it in accordance with those instructions. By this means it is hoped that more work will be exacted from the convicts, and that cash payments for labour will be largely reduced. The rules were experimentally put in force at Buxar, where the construction of the boundary wall was entrusted to the jail authorities. On the whole the rules have worked smoothly and given satisfaction. The wall will probably be completed before the end of the year. The cost for free labour has been almost infinitesimal; while the execution of the work is reported by the Executive Engineer to be "most satisfactory."

New rules for execution of works by jail officers.

III.—GUARDS AND ESCAPES

29. Closely connected with the subject of jail buildings, as affording the best means of ensuring the safe custody of prisoners, is the question of guarding our prisons and of escapes.

Guarding and escapes in 1876.

The total number of escapes during the past year was 134, of which 76 took place from jails and 58 from lockups. Of the whole, 72 were convicted prisoners and 62 were prisoners under trial. These figures, however, include 16 escapes which were not properly escapes from a jail at all, but from the custody of the police escort while in transit between the jail and court, or between one jail and another.

• 30. In the following table I contrast the escapes that have taken place in each of the last ten years. It will be seen that the figures for 1876, though greater than for the previous year, are still below the average of the last ten years. Indeed, were it not for three instances in which large gangs of under-trials escaped, the figures for the past year would have been lower than for any previous year:—

Number of jails which have a police guard 39 Ditto ditto warder watch 10 Number of lockups guarded by police 37 Ditto ditto warders 28

From this table it appears that, deducting the 15 cases in which the prisoners escaped from the custody of the police while in transit (and which, as I have said, cannot properly be considered to be escapes from jail*), only about one-sixth of the escapes occurred from outside the jail. The great majority of the escapes were from the inside of a jail or lockup. In 11 cases the prisoner walked through the gate; in 31 cases he scaled the wall or ramp or palisade in daylight; in 45 cases he broke out of the wards at night. In 26 cases the jail establishment alone was in fault, in 27 cases the police, and in 11 cases the blame may fairly be divided between both departments.

32. In the majority of escapes from outside the jail (except in the case of a lockup guarded by the police) the prison establishment must necessarily be in fault. The explanation in such cases is almost always the same old story, that the prisoner was allowed to go out of sight for some purpose or other and never seen again. Escapes through the gate are not so frequent as they used to be, but there were still no less than five from jails and six from lock-ups. Considering that at the main gate of a jail there ought always to be both a police sentry and a jail warder, and that the rules as to prisoners passing in and out are extremely precise, such escapes ought to be simply impossible. But the rules are not observed; gates are left wide open, and very often there is no gate-warder at all. Of the 29 prisoners who escaped first out of a pukka ward and then over the wall, 10 were under-trials who escaped in a body from the Rajshahye jail. Having picked the lock of their ward, they scaled the wall with the aid of a bamboo taken from a kutchha building in the yard. The matter was reported to Government at the time. Another body of nine under-trials escaped in a similar manner from the Midnapore central jail. In this case the prisoners were assisted to scale the boundary wall by one of the inner partition walls, which was a few feet lower in height, and in consequence of this escape the ends of all the partition walls where they touched the outer wall were dismantled, and the guard now patrol at night right round the inner side of the boundary wall. Of the rest, three escaped from Backergunge, two from Pooree, and one from each of the jails at Balasore, Hooghly, and Chittagong. The two prisoners who escaped from kutchha-pukka wards absconded from the Bhagalpore central jail.

A third large body of nine under-trials absconded from the Patooakhally lockup when it was blown down in the cyclone. The prisoners in the Dowlutkhan lockup were probably all drowned on that occasion; but as the responsible officers were missing and all the records were destroyed, it was impossible to ascertain either how many were in the lockup on the night in question or what became of them. The other escapes do not appear to call for special notice.

33. Of the 57 escapes from inside a jail, 39 were from pukka and 18 from kutchha jails. The number of jails that are more or less pukka was 39, the remaining ten jails being entirely kutchha. Thus on an average there was one escape for every pukka jail and nearly two for every kutchha jail.

34. Looking again at the agency by which the jails are guarded, and omitting the 15 escapes from the custody of the police during transit, I find that 11 escapes occurred from 10 jails in which there was a warder watch, and 59 escapes from 39 jails which were guarded by the police. In 28 lockups guarded by warders there were 6 escapes; in 57 lockups guarded by the police there were 43 escapes.

35. In last year's report I announced my intention of asking the Government to sanction a scheme for the selection and training of prison warders in central jails. This scheme has received the approval of Government during the current year. Its main feature is the entertainment of a body of 20 apprentice-warders in each central jail, to be drafted off from time to time, as they are drilled and trained, to replace the inefficient warders at present employed in district jails. At the same time the pay and prospects of the trained warders have been improved. As a necessary preliminary to the apprentice-warder scheme, a warder watch has been sanctioned in substitution of the police guard in all the central jails. In future, therefore, a small police guard will only be retained in these jails at the main gate, as a reserve in case of émeutes; the entire work of guarding and looking after the prisoners being carried on by a competent staff of trained prison officials. This is the system of guarding now in force in most other provinces of India, and it has certainly proved successful wherever introduced in Bengal. In course of time it is hoped that Magistrates and superintendents will be brought to recognize its advantages, and that all our pukka jails at least may before long be entrusted to a warder watch.

IV.—PRISON DISCIPLINE.

36. The Bengal system of classification is, theoretically, perhaps as perfect as any that could be devised under a system of imprisonment in association; practically, however, it has not been attended with all the success that was expected from it. In the first place the prisoners are by no means always correctly classified. Sometimes the requisite information is not supplied to the jail authorities by the Courts; at other times the important duty of determining the prisoner's class is left to the jailor, who is generally quite incompetent to perform it. In other cases, again, superintendents would seem to lay down rules for their own guidance totally irrespective of the Code. Thus in one jail, where I found a large number of prisoners who ought to have been in D class erroneously included in other classes, I was gravely informed that as D class prisoners cannot under the rules be flogged, it was considered inexpedient to have a D class at all. The importance of carrying out the rules on this subject has invariably been impressed upon jail officers on the occasion of my inspections. At three different times I have collected statistics of the numbers in each class in each jail, and the results are given below; but these figures give no idea of the different proportions of the classes in different jails. Of course it is not possible that the proportion should be exactly the same in every jail, but the wide differences that exist throw doubt on the accuracy of the classification in some jails.

	Total number in Class				Percentage on total population of
	A.	B.	C.	D.	A.	B.	C.	D.

1st June ...	748	6,763	7,953	1,759	43	393	462	102

The smaller percentages of the A and D classes during the current year are owing to the releases of 1st January last; many persons convicted of culpable homicide, rape, &c., who were released on that occasion, having been included in the A class, although they were not strictly dangerous characters.

37. But even were the classification laid down in the Code perfectly understood and correctly made, it would be necessary to pull down and rebuild half our jails in order to carry it out in its strict entirety. So far as the existing buildings and appliances for labour will admit of it, the different classes are kept apart; but neither the wards nor the workshops were originally constructed with this object, and it is obvious that there are forms of labour on which it is not always possible to employ only one class of convicts.

38. Moreover, there are still, I regret to say, jails in Bengal where the more primary and essential principles of classification have not yet been strictly enforced. Under-trials and civil prisoners are not yet always secluded from convicts, and very few jails have any separate accommodation for juveniles or non-labouring convicts. Several proposals to remedy these defects have been submitted to Government during the past year.

39. From the remarks made upon the management of the jails which I have inspected, it will be seen that there are comparatively few prisons with the internal discipline of which I am altogether satisfied. As regards central jails there is perhaps not much to complain of. In the majority of district jails, however, the discipline falls short of the standard which, I think, might and should be maintained. It is true that none of the prison officials have been properly trained, that few Bengalis possess the requisite qualifications to make a good jailor, and that everything depends upon the personal character and energy of the superintendent; but the success that has attended the exertions of some officers in this direction proves that a strict discipline is not impossible of attainment even with our present organization.

In making the above remarks, however, I must not be understood to ignore or underestimate the difficulties with which superintendents have had to contend during the current year in consequence of the release on the 1st January last of nearly all the best convict-overscers. As these officers may be said to form the backbone of our system of prison discipline, their sudden release, without warning and without due preparation, naturally reduced many jails for a time to a condition of comparative disorganization.

40. It seems to be the opinion of some officers that so long as full labour tasks are exacted it is of little consequence what the prisoners do at other times. I must confess I do not myself regard the labour test as all-sufficient. I consider that an enforced subordination and strict obedience to rules are perhaps of equal importance from a disciplinary point of view. I should like to see every jail in Bengal modelled after those at Bhagulpore, where even the most trifling movement is performed with almost military precision. Such little things as marching in step, keeping together in compact squads, preserving a strict silence, and so forth, unimportant though they may be in themselves, accustom the prisoners to the word of command and teach them self-restraint, and thus must prove valuable aids to any system of prison discipline.

41. But the fact is that in few district jails are the labour arrangements altogether satisfactory. There is often a want of sufficient appliances for penal labour. In some jails the tasks are only one-half or one-third of what they ought to be, and even these light tasks are not always strictly enforced. On the whole, however, I am glad to be able to report a decided improvement in this respect, and I trust that the current year will show even better results. A schedule of the daily tasks to be exacted in each department of labour has been circulated, and superintendents have been instructed to regulate the tasks according to this standard. Forms have been prescribed and issued for recording the work performed every day by each individual convict. The periodical visits of the superintendent of jail manufactures must also be productive of great good. On such occasions Mr. Donaldson examines and suggests improvements in the appliances for labour and the industries carried on. In this latter respect the main principle kept in view is the reduction of the large number of petty manufactures in almost every jail and the selection as far as possible for each large jail of characteristic industries adapted to its circumstances and surroundings. Through Mr. Donaldson's exertions, moreover, a much better quality of gunny-bag is now turned out in our mofussil jails than formerly, and a most promising form of prison industry is being developed in the manufacture of coir. Efforts are also being made to establish a market in Calcutta for articles of local consumption, such as oil, oil-cake, gunny-bags, coir, cotton and woollen goods, manufactured in neighbouring jails. Tread-mills have been erected at Rajshahye, Backergunge, Dacca, Bhagulpore, and Midnapore, and others will shortly be set to work at Patna, Shahabad, and Alipore. The manufacture of blankets, Indian carpets, and other woollen goods, has been approved as the staple industry of the Bhagulpore central jail, and a small plant of spinning machinery has been ordered out from England for the purpose. At Midnapore oil is being manufactured on a large scale, the preparation of coir yarn, mats and matting, has been introduced, and prison clothing is made for a number of other jails. At Hazareebagh and Buxar the majority of the convicts are still employed in building operations.

42. The average number of convicts sentenced to labour was 20,184, of whom 18,712 are returned as effectives; of these—

831 were employed as prison officers ;
2,773	ditto	as prison servants ;
3,060	ditto	in building and repairing jails either under the Public Works Department or under jail officers ;
1,129	ditto	in the jail gardens ;
9,972	ditto	in manufactures, and
579	ditto	in extramural labour outside the prison precincts.

The number employed as prison officers and servants was less than 20 per cent. of the total number of effectives, those employed on manufactures being 53 per cent.

43. Of those employed on manufactures in jails only, 2,327 were engaged on different forms of penal labour. Under the new Jail Code all convicts (with some exceptions) are put to penal labour for the first three months of their sentence, and penal labour may also be exacted as a punishment. Now on the 31st December last (which may be taken as a fair specimen of every day in the year), the number of convicts in jails who had not completed three months of their sentence was 2,485. The labour rules in force in 1876 were not quite the same as those prescribed by the new Code, but the above figures show that, as already stated, the appliances for penal labour are not yet sufficient to enable the superintendent of every jail to carry out the rules.

44. The daily average number of convicts employed on each of the principal manufactures is shown below; a large proportion of them were, of course, employed in manufacturing articles of food or clothing for their own consumption :—

45. The transfer of long-term prisoners in future to central jails may naturally be expected to result in a falling off of manufacturing profits in district jails; and looking at the generally insignificant character of these profits, even at present, the question arises whether in such jails, or at any rate in some of the smaller of them, superintendents should not be authorized to impose labour of an unremunerative character. In many district jails it would seem to be almost impossible to do more than recover the cost of the raw material purchased, and some of them do not always effect this. To take the Chumparun jail as a case in point, the labour of 200 prisoners and the use of a working capital of nearly Rs. 4,000 resulted in a profit to Government of Rs. 85. If the labour used to produce this result were really hard labour, there would perhaps not be much cause to object, though even then I would urge that the grant of Rs. 4,000 might have been much more profitably employed in a central jail. But even if full tasks were exacted from the trained workmen, we must recollect that it takes the greater part of six months to train a convict to spin or weave his full task, and during this period, which, in the majority of cases, would see the imprisonment terminate, his labour must necessarily be more or less light. And even when the convict has been trained and turns out his full task day after day, the result of his labour is rarely such as to leave any profit upon the cost of the materials. The remedy which at present suggests itself is this. Convicts with short terms, say six months and under, should only be put to forms of labour which can be measured, and the full prescribed task should be strictly enforced. If such forms of labour cannot be made remunerative, superintendents should be at liberty to introduce unremunerative, or what is sometimes called objectless labour. This state of things lately occurred in the Darjeeling jail, the superintendent of which reported that he was unable to devise any remunerative form of labour besides cane work, on which I objected to see all the prisoners employed, and I accordingly authorized him to introduce a form of "shot drill," by making the prisoners carry stones or bags of sand round their yards for a certain number of hours every day. It seems to me that there are some other district jails in which similar forms of labour might be introduced with advantage.

46. A system of rewards and punishments has long been recognized as an indispensable adjunct to prison discipline. The rewards offered in Bengal are of two kinds: promotion to convict-overseerships and remission of sentence with gratuities on release. Both descriptions of reward are mainly reserved for long-term prisoners, and both are regulated in great measure by a system of marks. Formerly the convict-overseers were allowed extra food, and I am informed that this privilege was highly appreciated by the prisoners. The practice has, however, been discontinued under the new Code, the privilege of earning extra marks having been substituted. The number of overseers employed in jails during the year under report was (including 16 females) 1,373, of whom 133 only, or less than 10 per cent., were degraded or otherwise punished. The average number of convict-overseers employed in all jails and lockups was 831, or less than 4 per cent..

47. In 1876 only prisoners with sentences exceeding two years came under the mark rules. The total number who were under the rules during the year was 9,096, of whom 4,558, or one-half, earned marks at the rate of 40 per annum; the maximum number of ordinary marks that can be earned in a year being 48. The number who were released during the year, having obtained a remission of their sentences under these rules, was 539, against 360 in the previous year.

48. Under the new Code prisoners sentenced to two years' imprisonment come under the rules, and some other minor changes have been introduced. The rules work well on the whole, and are greatly appreciated in those jails where the superintendent has been at the trouble of making them understood and of seeing that they are fairly carried out. Several instances of negligence, however, in regard to this latter point have come before me during the year, and I have had more than once to call general attention to the rules on the subject. The mark system can never be completely successful unless prisoners are allowed the full benefit of the marks they have earned. A single instance in which a prisoner is detained beyond the time when it is known that he is entitled to his release does more to discredit the system than can be compensated by half-a-dozen releases at the proper moment.

49. So far as the punishment registers illustrate the subject, the discipline of our prisons generally would appear to be much the same as in the previous year. Criminal offences aggregated 667, against 403 in 1875 and 632 in 1874. Offences against prison regulations numbered 24,945, against 25,209 in 1875 and 31,475 in 1874. The criminal offences committed in jail are mostly attempts to escape, acts of immorality, petty thefts and assaults, and (except in serious cases) are ordinarily treated as offences against prison discipline. The vast majority of jail offences, however, were cases of idleness or wilful mismanagement of work (16,387); there were 2,862 cases of possession of stolen articles and 2,211 cases of other forms of wilful disobedience.

Offences against prison discipline.

50. The number of punishments by the criminal courts was 64, and by jail officers 17,654, against 42 and 17,870 respectively in the previous year; the percentage of total punishments to the average number of convicts in jail being 89.21, against 91.35 in 1875. I am not one of those who regard a decrease in the number of punishments as necessarily a sign of improved discipline. On the contrary, it quite as often indicates laxity and remissness in the general management of the prisoners. Unfortunately, convicts are apt to misbehave themselves even in the best regulated jails. We know by experience that they will not work unless they are made to work, and that even then they will do as little as will satisfy the superintendent and the jailor. Of course, by allowing offences to pass by unnoticed or undetected, and by permitting the convicts under their charge to perform just as much or as little labour as they like, the number of punishments can be kept down; but it by no means follows that the discipline in such a jail will compare favourably with another in which the punishments are more numerous. One of our strictest jails in point of discipline is notoriously the Presidency jail, where the ratio of punishments to the average number of convicts was in the native jail 242·33, and in the European jail 191·78. At Alipore, which is also another strict jail, the ratio was 147·18, and at Bhagulpore 117·39 in the district and 144·67 in the central jail. The highest ratio for the year was attained at Jessore (405·76); but, as I pointed out at the time of my inspection, the punishments inflicted were so light as to be practically ineffectual. So at Dinagepore, Bogra, and some other places, where the ratio of punishments seems sufficiently high, but where the punishments themselves would seem to have been scarcely felt. On the other hand, Midnapore and Moorshedabad, though exhibiting a minimum of punishments, are by no means badly managed jails. At Rungpore, which has the smallest ratio on the list (8·68), the labour tasks are altogether insufficient. At Nuddea, Pubna, Furreedpore, and Mozufferpore, the standard of discipline falls far short of what it is in other jails which have a much higher ratio of punishments.

51. Corporal punishment was inflicted in 2,370 cases, against 2,973 in 1875 and 4,143 in 1874. Fetters were imposed in 5,204 cases; 748 prisoners were punished with solitary confinement (against 936 in 1875 and 1,225 in 1874); 3,216 with reduced diet; 2,772 with reduced diet in solitary confinement; 2,995 with penal labour, and 285 with other punishments, such as degradation, loss of marks, hand-cuffs, cutting the hair of females, &c. The falling off in the number of cases of solitary confinement is, I believe, to be explained by the fact that this form of punishment is now-a-days generally combined with penal diet; and there seems to have been some confusion in the return for 1875 between cases of reduced diet only and reduced diet in cells, several jails showing the latter form of punishment which I know to have no cells at all. The infliction of penal diet without seclusion of the offender I regard as almost impracticable. The prisoner, if left in association with others, manages to get extra food somehow or other, and consequently the new Code very properly provides that whenever there are cells penal diet shall not be given except in conjunction with imprisonment in cells. At the same time penal diet, if strictly enforced, is one of the most effective of the limited punishments at our disposal; and I think it very desirable, therefore, that so soon as the finances admit of it separate cells should be constructed in all those jails which have not yet been supplied with them.

V.—FINANCE.

52. Excluding manufacturing charges, the expenditure of the department during the year amounted to Rs. 11,16,740, against Rs. 11,00,667 in 1875, showing an increase of Rs. 16,073. The increase or decrease under each head of expenditure is shown in the following table:—

Head of Expenditure.				1876.	1875.	Increase or decrease.
				Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Supervision	40,114	41,417	—1,303
Rations	5,65,096	5,61,832	+3,264
Establishment	3,19,222	3,10,739	+8,483
Hospital charges	36,487	33,346	+3,141
Clothing	63,059	73,743	—10,684
Contingencies	69,831	63,751	+6,080
Petty repairs	22,931	15,839	+7,092
Total				11,16,740	11,00,667	+16,073

It will be seen that there has been an increase under every head of charge except those of supervision and clothing. Owing to the larger number of prisoners in confinement, however, the cost per prisoner under all the above heads was actually less than in the previous year, being Rs. 51-2-11, against Rs. 51-7-9 in 1875. It will be explained further on that a considerable fraction of the above amount (aggregating Rs. 1,07,638) was not actual cash outlay, but represents the value of articles consumed in jails but originally charged for in the manufacturing department.

53. I shall now endeavour to explain, in as few words as possible, the main causes of the increase or decrease under each head of charge.

Explanation of increase or decrease of cost.

The net decrease in the charges of my own office is due to the absence of my Personal Assistant on leave during part of the year and the employment of a smaller extra establishment. On the other hand, a sum of Rs. 762 has been paid by this office in liquidation of demands of the East Indian Railway Company on account of additional fares under the orders for the transfer of prisoners by rail, and for printing photographs in the Surveyor-General's Office.

The increase in rations is explained by the larger number of prisoners in confinement, the average cost per prisoner being actually less than in the previous year. All the principal articles of diet, with the exception of fish, were cheaper than in 1875. The average* price paid in each year was as follows:—

					1875.	1876.
					Rs. A.	Rs. A.
Rice	2 4	2 1 per maund.
Atta	3 9	3 1 „
Dal	3 0	2 5 „
Meat	7 4	6 14 „
Fish	6 6	6 15 „
Salt	4 14	4 13 „

The increase under the head of establishment is to be explained by the additional expenditure on account of the Durbhunga jail, which was only established late in 1875; by larger payments to the superintendents at Hazareebagh, Tipperah, Mozufferpore, Chittagong, Midnapore, Pubna, and Lohardugga; and by the annual increments to the salaries of jailors and others. The average cost per prisoner under this head was Rs. 14-10-1, against Rs. 14-8-6 in the previous year.

Hospital charges have increased in consequence of the greater sickness that was prevalent during the year and the introduction of a more liberal sick diet in the Rungpore, Backergunge, and other jails. The average cost per prisoner was Re. 1-10-8, against Re. 1-8-11 in 1875.

The large decrease in the cost of clothing (amounting to nine annas per prisoner) may be generally ascribed to greater economy having been exercised by utilizing old clothing as far as possible. The blanket coats given for the first time in 1875 to all prisoners in Behar were not worn out with one season's wear, and in few instances needed renewal in 1876. The supply of blankets, too, remaining over from the previous year seems to have been larger than usual. The average cost per prisoner was Rs. 2-14-6, against Rs. 3-7-6 in 1875.

* This average is not strictly accurate, but is sufficiently so for all practical purposes. It is calculated upon the monthly averages for each jail.

The increase in contingencies is due partly to increased charges on account of transfers (the number of prisoners transferred in 1876 being some 2,000 more than the number transferred in 1875), and partly to the supply of new locks, cooking and conservancy utensils, and locked lanterns to the Buxar, Durbhunga, and other jails. The average cost per prisoner rose from Rs. 2-15-8 in 1875 (i.e. after deducting the cost of treadmills and debiting it to manufactures) to Rs. 3-3-2 in 1876.

The increased expenditure on petty construction and repairs may, I think, be attributed to the reduction of the grant for jail buildings in the Public Works budget. Under the circular order of Government, No. 3 of January 1875, it was laid down that all petty repairs to permanent buildings should be carried out by local officers from funds to be provided in the departmental budget, and these orders have fully come into effect only during the year under report. The charge per prisoner has accordingly risen from Rs. 0-11-11 in 1875 to Rs. 1-0-9.

54. Having thus generally indicated the cause of the difference under each head of expenditure between the figures for 1875 and those for 1876, I propose to offer a few remarks on each head of expenditure as illustrated by the statements X and XI.

The price of food is of course beyond the control of this department, and the charge under this head must mainly depend upon the general prosperity of the country. But something can be, and has been, done to reduce expenditure (1) by the purchase of large stocks at harvest time, and (2) by the performance in the jail itself of the preparatory processes requisite to render the article fit for consumption, such as husking the paddy or dal, grinding the wheat, expressing the oil, and so forth. In many jails I believe that a commoner rice than is used at present might not only be given without risk to health, but would actually prove more nutritious. Unnecessary expense, too, has sometimes been incurred in endeavouring to comply with the rule which forbids rice less than six months old to be given to prisoners. The Government has lately at my request reduced this period to three months. There would seem to be no good reason why the average cost of feeding a prisoner should be so much more in a lockup (Rs. 31-0-7) than in a jail (Rs. 25-13-6); the fact that it is so would appear to indicate that the rates charged are not sufficiently scrutinized by sub-divisional officers. The cost of rations is moreover unusually high in the Jessore, Julpigoree, Chittagong, and Durbhunga jails. No satisfactory explanation of this fact can be given in this office, and the attention of the superintendents in charge will be called to it. But I may say that the comparative cost of rations is often complicated and misrepresented by the inclusion of charges for cooking utensils, subsistence allowance, and gratuities paid to prisoners on release, &c., which charges should properly find a place under the head of contingencies. In the Maldah, Doomka, and Singbhoom jails, the cost on account of rations was less than Rs. 20 a head.

55. The charge for establishment ought properly to be considered in connection with that for police guard, which will be referred to presently. Jails in which a warder watch has been introduced have naturally a more expensive prison staff than jails which are guarded by the police. These being fixed charges, too, the cost per prisoner varies according to the size of the jail, being of course proportionately higher in small jails like Maldah, Pubna, and Pooree, than in large jails like Moorsshedabad, Dinagepore, and Rungpore.

56. Hospital charges, it will be seen, are increasing from year to year.

Hospital charges. In the last four years they have risen from Re. 1-3 per head to Re. 1-10. The increase, however, is not general; in some jails (e.g. Bankoora, Midnapore, Presidency, Nuddea, Patna, and Bhagulpore district) there has been a steady decrease. This is an item of expenditure, however, for which this office is not solely responsible; and I must confess I am not altogether able to explain the increase. It has seemed to me at times that there is a tendency on the part of some medical officers to indent for articles which are not absolutely necessary in a jail hospital, and I have taken on myself the responsibility of disallowing some such indents during the current year. I find, too, there has been a difference of practice as to what should be classed as hospital charges, some superintendents including the whole of a prisoner's diet while in hospital, and others the extra diet only. It is only by some such explanation as this that I can account for the extraordinary difference in the cost per head of the average number sick in different neighbouring jails. Why, for instance, should the cost per head of sick be Rs. 39 in Burdwan and Rs. 10 only in Beerbhoom, Rs. 9 in Nuddea and Rs. 34 in Jessore, Rs. 43 in Dinagepore, Rs. 4 in Maldah, and Rs. 93 in Rungpore, Rs. 6 in Singbhoom and Rs. 44 in Manbhoom? The subject has already attracted my attention, and superintendents have been told in future to show extra diet only under this head.

57. The hospital charges of the following jails are always much higher than elsewhere:—

Presidency.	Russa.	Rungpore.	Julpigoree.
Alipore.	Baraset.	Darjeeling.	Backergunge.

With the exception of the Presidency and Darjeeling, these are all unhealthy jails. At Darjeeling the small number of prisoners in confinement swells the average cost somewhat unfairly. In the Presidency jail one-half the total cost, I observe, was on account of milk.

58. The cost of clothing per head of average strength was Rs. 2-14 in 1876, against Rs. 3-7 in 1875. The average for the last four years is about Rs. 3-2. The amount ought not to vary much from year to year, and I trust therefore that the reduced charges for the year under report really point to greater economy and increased care on the part of jail officers. The charges in the Maldah, Pubna, Dacca, Furreedpore, and Lohardugga jails, however, are considerably higher than the average, and the superintendents will be called on for explanation. At Furreedpore I recollect remarking at the time of my inspection that the clothing in use was in excess of the authorized scale.

Clothing.

59. The increase in contingent charges during the year has been shown to be due to exceptional causes. At the same time

Contingencies.

these charges have always a tendency to expand if not carefully and closely scrutinized. It is possible that transfer charges may increase in future years under the central jail system, though I doubt myself if it will be found to cost more to send a certain number of prisoners every year to the central jail of their division than to transfer the surplus population of a district jail at one end of Bengal to another district jail at the other end, as was often the practice formerly. Moreover, if prisoners are generally retransferred to their own districts for release, the charges for travelling expenses and subsistence allowance ought (if anything) to decrease under the central jail system. No opportunity is lost of impressing upon jail officers the necessity of economy in regard to these charges, and further orders now under issue will, it is hoped, have the effect of enabling them to exercise a stricter check than heretofore. The contingent charges during the year have been particularly high in the Maldah, Pubna, Darjeeling, Julpigoree, Patna, Durbhunga, and Chumparun jails.

60. The expenditure incurred by the Police Department on account of jail-guards is reported to have been Rs. 1,65,259, against Rs. 1,58,147 in the previous year. The amount varies to some extent from time to time in consequence of changes in the constitution of the guards—not of course in the number, but in the grades of the men composing the guard. The new jail at Durbhunga accounts for Rs. 3,500, or about half the increase, and five new lockups for an additional sum of Rs. 1,700. There have also been extra guards employed at Bhagulpore, Julpigoree, Patna, Mymensingh, Darjeeling, and Rungpore. On the other hand, the guards would seem to have been reduced at Cuttack, Midnapore, Jessore, and Hazareebagh.

61. The police-guard being a fixed charge, the cost per prisoner is, of course, disproportionately high in small or insecure jails like those at Maldah, Bogra, Pubna, Darjeeling, Julpigoree, Durbhunga, Chumparun, Doomka, Pooree, Lohardugga, Singbhoom, and Manbhoom. But there seems no good reason why it should be as high as it is in the Beerbhoom, Nuddea, and Patna jails. Attention has already been drawn to the matter in my inspection remarks on those jails, and the Magistrates have been asked to consider the expediency of substituting a warder watch. The jail-guard seems also unusually expensive at Tipperah, Chittagong, and Noakholly.

62. I proceed now to show the result of the manufactory operations for the year.

The following profit and loss account contrasts the totals of statement XIII with those for the previous year:—

	1876.	1875.
	Rs.	Rs.
Cash received for articles sold	6,24,800	6,80,300
Value of goods supplied for public purposes	2,10,400	1,48,000
Store of manufactured goods in hand at the end of the year	1,48,200	2,09,500
Total	9,83,400	10,37,800
Deduct goods in hand at the commencement of the year	2,09,500	3,08,400
A.—Balance, being the outturn of the year	7,73,900	7,29,400
Raw material, plant, &c., in hand at the commencement of the year	1,23,500	1,09,200
Charges of the year	6,20,700	5,52,100
Total	7,44,200	6,61,300
Deduct raw material, plant, &c., in store at the close of the year	1,64,200	1,23,500
B.—Balance, or expenditure of the year	5,80,000	5,37,800
A minus B, profit	1,93,900	1,91,600
Cash remitted to the treasury during the year, including value of goods supplied for Government purposes adjusted by book transfer	8,35,200	8,28,300
Cash received from treasury, or expenditure including value of goods supplied from other jails adjusted by book transfer	6,20,700	5,52,100
Balance, or cash profit	2,14,500	2,76,200

63. From this statement it appears that while the charges for the year exceeded those for the previous year by a sum of no less than Rs. 68,600, the additional profit amounted to no more than Rs. 2,300. This result appears unfavourable at first sight, but it is satisfactorily explained by the difference in the credits received for manufactured goods supplied to Government (Rs. 62,300). The fact is that during the year under report the preparation of food-grains (husking the paddy, &c.) by means of convict labour was introduced into several large jails. The work being a special form of prison labour, the transaction naturally found its way into the factory books. The raw material (paddy, wheat, oil-seeds, &c.) was purchased originally from the manufactory budget grant, and subsequently transferred by a book entry to the head of rations. On such transactions there is of course no profit; the rule is that the manufacturing department must simply charge the actual cost of the raw material, unless the manufactured article is supplied to another jail, when a charge for labour may be added. But the cost of the material is shown twice over—first, in the factory charges, and then under the proper head of maintenance, rations, clothing, &c., as the case may be. The real profit ought to appear in reduced charges under those heads, and to some extent there has been a reduction.

64. Another point which seems to call for explanation is the falling off in the cash receipts. The amount actually realized in cash during the year was Rs. 6,24,800, against Rs. 6,80,300 in 1875, showing a decrease of some Rs. 55,000. But it will be seen that in 1875 there were large realizations on account of articles manufactured in previous years, the stock of manufactured articles having been reduced during that year by Rs. 99,000, while it was only reduced during 1876 by a sum of Rs. 61,000. Further, the increase of raw material in stock was greater during 1876 by Rs. 26,000 than during 1875. The actual profit made during the year was Rs. 1,93,900, against Rs. 1,91,600 in 1875. Deducting from the total charges for the year the sum of Rs. 1,07,638, being the value of goods consumed in jails (on the great bulk of which no profit is charged), the profit made amounts to some 41 per cent. upon the working capital employed.

65. As I stated last year, the profit made from year to year depends mainly on the Alipore jail, where steam machinery is employed for spinning jute. The balance sheet of this jail is accordingly shown separately; it will be understood that it does not include the transaction of the jail printing press.

Profits and losses in particular jails.

66. The jails which earned the largest profits in proportion to the number of effective prisoners were :—

	Profit. Rs.	Number of effectives.	Average profit per head. Rs.
Alipore	84,682	1,689	50·1
Presidency (Native)	30,865	856	36·0
„ (European)	1,470	59	24·9
Russa	4,251	172	24·7
Darjeeling	1,019	44	23·1
Burdwan	5,611	321	17·4
Tipperah	4,333	259	16·7
Noakholly	2,957	177	16·7
Moorshedabad	6,795	461	14·7
Doomka	1,193	85	14·0
Purneah	3,590	282	12·7
Nuddea	3,891	318	12·2
Dacca	7,636	649	11·7

Of the other jails, Maldah was the only one that earned more than Rs. 8 per head of effectives. In no less than 18 jails the profit averaged less than Rs. 5 per head, while in three jails there was an actual loss. These jails were Bankoora, Hooghly, and Rungpore, and the explanations which the superintendents give are as follows :—

Bankoora.—Dr. Mountain writes that “a great portion of the gunny-bags and cloths from last year were sold by public auction at a loss.”

Hooghly.—Dr. Nicholson writes as follows:—“The balance of stock in hand from 1875, valued at Rs. 24,515, was sold for only Rs. 12,664. The value of this material was calculated at old rates, and this estimated value was not realized in the sales. The jail actually lost nothing in these sales, as the money realized covered the cost of the raw material and part of the labour expended.” It follows, however, that the Hooghly jail has been taking credit in past years for larger profits than were actually realized.

Rungpore.—Dr. Ghose attributes the loss partly to the unhealthiness of the prisoners, from whom full labour tasks could not be exacted ; partly to the sale at depreciated rates of goods manufactured in previous years ; and partly to losses occasioned by the late jailor's carelessness.

67. There is no doubt whatever that one main reason why jail manufactures are not more profitable than they are is owing to these large losses upon the stocks of manufactured goods. No matter what may be the demand or what the price of the raw material, superintendents are content, and in some cases, I admit, obliged to go on manufacturing, and thus large stocks are accumulated, which only deteriorate by keeping and ultimately have to be sold at a loss. The stocks remaining at the end of the year in the Beerbhoom, Jessore, Dinagepore, Pubna, and Dacca jails were much larger than they ought to have been.

68. The profit shown in statement XIII is calculated after taking into account the raw material and manufactured goods in hand, and it is clear that it may be unfairly swelled, as in the case of Hooghly referred to above, by putting a fictitious value upon the material or goods in stock. Column 6 of that statement, on the other hand, gives no credit for articles supplied for Government purposes, for which no cash is received. If the charges for the year (column 4D) are subtracted from the total credits, as shown in columns 3, A and B, it will be seen that the total profits realized during the year amounted to Rs. 2,14,443. According to this calculation there were six jails which made a loss, that is, spent more than they received. These jails were Midnapore, Pubna, Chittagong, Bhagulpore central, and the Penitentiary at Hazareebagh. In regard to Midnapore the explanation is that at the end of the year the jail had large advances outstanding for oil-seeds which were not supplied till the spring of the current year; and in the other jails the loss is similarly explained by an increase in the raw material or manufactured goods in hand at the close of the year.

69. Another cause which tends to diminish the profits of jail manufactures is the necessity which frequently arises of providing workshed accommodation out of the jail revenue in consequence of the limited grants available in the Public Works budget. Thus during the year under report a sum of no less than Rs. 3,300 was charged against the Rajshahye jail profits on account of a godown and workshed erected in that jail. The total amount spent on such buildings during the year and charged against manufacturing profits aggregated Rs. 6,887. It is clear that were every jail complete in itself these charges would not be necessary, and the jail profits would appear to be so much more.

70. The amount of bills outstanding at the end of the year was much the same as at the end of 1875. The subject has received constant attention during the current year, and the amounts have for the most part been realized. Advantage has also been taken of the present demand for gunny-bags to reduce the quantity of manufactured goods in stock.

71. Amongst the lockups the most successful in its manufactures was Magoorah, which made a profit of Rs. 110. Chooa-danga, Sasseram, Behar, Narail, Kishorgunge, Satkhira, and Busseerhat, also made over Rs. 50. Twenty other lockups made not less than Rs. 20, ten not less than Rs. 10, sixteen not less than Rs. 5, thirteen less than Rs. 5, while the following eleven made an actual loss :—

Loss.				Loss.
Rs.				Rs.
Dowlutkhan	86	Khoordah	7
Madaripore	32	Buxar	7
Bettiah	30	Contai	5
Hajeeepore	14	Culna	2
Dum-Dum	10	Barripore	1
Jhenidah	10				1

At Dowlutkhan the loss was caused by the cyclone, but no explanation is given of the loss in the other lockups.

The total amount earned in 85 lockups aggregated Rs. 1,263, giving an average of about Rs. 15 each.

72. The financial results of the year may generally be summed up as follows:—

General financial results.

	Total amount. Rs.	Average per head. Rs. A. P.
A—Expenditure from Jail Budget—
(1)—For general purposes	11,16,740	51 2 11
(2)—For manufactures	6,20,684	28 7 2
Total gross expenditure from Jail Budget ...	17,37,424	79 10 1
Deduct receipts by cash or transfer	8,35,127	38 4 5
Net expenditure from Jail Budget	9,02,297	41 5 8
B—Add expenditure from Police Budget for guarding jails ...	1,65,259	7 9 2
Total net expenditure for maintenance and guarding ...	10,67,556	48 14 10

The expenditure from the budget of the Public Works Department on account of jails amounted during the year to Rs. 1,51,792, being about one lakh of rupees less than in the previous year. The expenditure on account of medical stores is reported to have aggregated Rs. 10,472, and that on account of printing and stationery to Rs. 2,444.

73. In last year's report I stated my intention of endeavouring to procure some return of the value of convict labour employed upon buildings, whether by jail superintendents or by the Public Works Department. The returns furnished by superintendents value the labour so employed during the year at Rs. 87,742; but unfortunately they do not always distinguish between works carried on by jail officers and those executed by the Public Works Department. Moreover, the value put upon the convicts' labour has for the most part been entered at what the superintendent has chosen to estimate it, the officers of the Public Works Department having neglected to intimate to jail superintendents the value of the work performed, as required by the rules. The following are some of the largest items; Midnapore central jail, Rs. 18,368; Presidency, Rs. 3,357; Jessore, Rs. 2,929; Rajshahye, Rs. 13,753; Buxar, Rs. 9,078; Muzafferpore, Rs. 7,396; Bhagalpore central, Rs. 7,124; Hazareebagh central, Rs. 12,432.

74. I have explained in a previous paragraph that the profits of the Alipore jail are exclusive of the work done in the jail press. It is necessary therefore to give some account of the result of the year's operations in the press.

It will be remembered that the form-store was transferred in 1870 from the Stationery Office to the Alipore jail, and issues to local offices were from that year made direct from the jail. The new system did not work satisfactorily however, and in April of the year under report the form-store was retransferred to the Stationery Office. It then transpired that the manager of the press had been working from hand to mouth as it were, supplying forms in dribblets of from three to six months' supply and keeping no sufficient stock in hand. Mr. Jones's explanation was to the effect that the frequent change of forms involved great loss when large stocks were accumulated. But his arrangements were considered to be unbusinesslike, and the Superintendent of Stationery insisted on having at least a year's supply of forms in stock. This large addition to the current indents combined with other causes to throw the press into difficulties, from which it has had to be relieved by special action on the part of Government.

75. The daily average number of prisoners employed in the press during the year was 285, and the value of the work performed by them, at the rates sanctioned by the Printing Committee of 1871, amounted to Rs. 1,11,636. To produce this result an expenditure was incurred of Rs. 26,430, made up of the following items :—

	Rs.
Fixed establishment	13,732
Extra (including paid compositors)	5,237
Block and plant	920
Contingencies	6,059
Petty repairs to buildings	482

The net value of the prisoners' work was thus Rs. 85,206. Over and above this, the press found work for the prisoners in the Presidency and Russa jails to the value of Rs. 6,551 and Rs. 2,215 respectively.

76. The following table contrasts the work done in the press during the last three years :—

YEAR.	Daily average number of convicts.	Number of forms printed.	Value of forms.	Press charges	Surplus.
			Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1874	315	22,532,072	1,05,601	28,045	77,556
1875	382	29,076,566	1,32,077	29,307	1,02,770
1876	285	36,335,707	1,11,636	26,430	85,206

The decrease in the charges for 1876 is explained by Dr. Lynch to be due to the employment of a fewer number of paid compositors, the total amount spent on this account during the year being no more than Rs. 209.

77. Dr. Lynch concludes his report as follows :—

"The above is the not unsuccessful financial history of the press for the year 1876. On turning to its working arrangements nothing so satisfactory can be found. For its want of proper businesslike arrangements the press received the censure of Government on one occasion during the year, and was several times made the subject of serious complaint by heads of departments. In explanation of its shortcomings, it is necessary to recall the difficulties under which the press was labouring during the year. It had on hand from March to June the retransfer of the Form Store Department, a work of some magnitude, and one which led necessarily to some confusion in the record and issue of work. It was receiving large additional demands for forms, such as those of the Mahomedan Marriage Registration Act, new sanitary forms, new Jail Code forms, and the Land Registration forms. Again, the press was suddenly called upon, on the transfer of the form store, to supply the Superintendent of Stationery with stock to the extent of 15 months' supply of all the forms used by departments. This completed the embarrassment of the press, which was found, as the year went on, to be falling into a hopeless state of arrears, for which it could not be said to be altogether responsible."

The press has formed the subject of a good deal of correspondence during the current year, and the question of its future management is now under the consideration of Government.

VI.—SANITARY.

78. A report by the Surgeon-General on the health of the jails during the year is appended as usual, but I may be permitted to make a few general remarks on the subject in this place.

Improvement in health of Bengal jails.

The Prison Committee of 1864 found that the ratio of deaths to the average strength of the Bengal and Assam jails for the ten years ending with 1862 was 10·05 per cent. In the subsequent fourteen years this percentage for the Bengal jails alone has fallen to 5·89. Excluding the jails now under the Assam Administration, the sanitary improvement in the Bengal jails and lockups during the period in question is shown in the following table:—

YEAR.	Daily average number of prisoners in jail.	Daily average sick.	Percentage of daily average sick.	NUMBER OF DEATHS		Total number of deaths.	PERCENTAGE OF DEATHS

Average...	19,026	731	3·84	203	916	1,119	1·0	4·8	5·89

79. From this table it will be seen that the percentage of sick on average strength has varied between 5·45 in the famine year of 1866 and 3·35 in 1870, the average for the fourteen years being 3·84. Similarly, the percentage of deaths on average strength has varied between 10·70 in 1866 and 4·00 in 1871, the average being 5·89. It will also be seen that this wide fluctuation in the annual rate of mortality is in a large measure attributable to deaths from cholera, which accounts for one per cent. of the mortality for the whole period. The percentage of deaths from cholera was highest in 1866 (3·3) and lowest in 1871 (0·2). Excluding cholera, the rate of mortality during the fourteen years has fluctuated between 7·4 (in 1873 and 1866) and 3·6 (in 1870), the mean average being 4·8 per cent.

80. During the year under report both sickness and mortality have been somewhat greater than for some years previous, but the table above also shows that this was mainly due to the prevalence of cholera. The number and percentage of deaths from cholera were higher last year than in any year since 1866. Excluding cholera, the mortality was not higher than the average of the previous four years.

81. Now, turning to statement XV, I find that in the following jails the mortality among convicts alone exceeded 6 per cent. The jails are arranged in order of percentage of mortality from all causes, the order in which the jail would stand were deaths from cholera excluded being appended in brackets.

1. Julpigoree. (2)*
2. Rungpore. (1)*
3. Chumparun. (3)*
4. Pubna. (6)*
5. Backergunge. (4)*
6. Hazareebagh central. (9)
7. Sarun.*
8. Lohardugga.*
9. Singbhoom. (5)
10. Patna. (12)*

11. Mozufferpore. (15)*
12. Pooree. (7)
13. Durbhunga. (11)
14. Baraset. (8)
15. Bogra. (10)*
16. Shahabad. (14)*
17. Burdwan.*
18. Russa. (13)
19. Manbhoom.*

In the Sarun, Lohardugga, Burdwan, and Manbhoom jails the excessive mortality is entirely accounted for by outbreaks of cholera. In the following jails, on the other hand, there were no deaths at all from cholera:—Russa,* Baraset,* Rungpore, Bogra, Pooree, and Singbhoom.

82. Of the jails mentioned in the last paragraph, the excessive unhealthiness of the year seems to have been exceptional in the case of Pubna, Hazareebagh, Singbhoom, Patna, and Pooree, not being confirmed by the experience of late years. The following table, however, will show that others in the list only maintained their well-known reputation for unhealthiness:—

JAILS.	PERCENTAGE OF DEATHS UPON AVERAGE STRENGTH.
	1876.	1875.	1874.	1873.	1872.	1871.	1870.	1869.	1868.	1867.
Julpigoree ...	20.6	24.6	27.0	5.5	42.6	19.2	9.1	Not in existence.
Rungpore ...	17.5	12.4	17.6	7.7	3.6	6.9	12.8	15.3	15.4	11.7
Chumparun ...	15.8	6.9	15.2	14.7	13.7	9.0	3.6	9.6	4.9	1.8

The Gya jail shows a great improvement during the year, which the medical officer attributes (1) to the prosperous condition of the people owing to a succession of good harvests, and (2) to the practice of boiling the drinking water. The improved health of the Midnapore jail is no doubt due to the discontinuance of the practice of transferring convicts to that jail from Eastern Bengal.

83. In some cases, no doubt, as at Backergunge, and perhaps at Singbhoom, the unhealthiness of the jail is due to the insanitary conditions of the buildings. But I may be permitted to draw attention to the fact that all the jails situated in the sub-Himalayan districts are more or less unhealthy—a fact which seems to indicate that the cause is to be sought in the physical conditions of those districts rather than in the situation or management of the jail. I think this will be evident from the following table, which contrasts the mortality in these jails with the general average for all the jails of Bengal for the last 33 years. The mortality in the Purneah and Dinagepore jails, though reduced to something like the average in recent years, was formerly, it will be observed, as high as any of the others:—

	1876.	1875.	1874.	1873.	1872.	1871.	1870.	1869.	Average for 25 years before.
Darbhanga ...	8.4
Purneah ...	5.2	3.7	6.0	2.9	6.8	4.0	4.1	10.2	10.23
Dinapore ...	4.2	3.2	5.3	3.0	3.6	6.1	7.2	10.1	10.17
Julpigore ...	20.6	24.6	27.0	5.5	42.6	19.2	9.1
Rungpore ...	17.5	12.4	17.6	7.7	3.6	6.9	12.8	15.3	11.23
Average for all jails ...	5.87	4.96	5.59	4.84	5.40	4.05	4.62	5.14	7.86

84. From a comparison of columns 3 and 5 of statement XV, it will be seen that most of the jails were more or less overcrowded at some time or other during the year. Of the 19 jails mentioned in paragraph 81, those which were overcrowded have been marked with an asterisk. But besides the jails mentioned in that paragraph I find that the following were also greatly overcrowded during the year, viz. Bankoora, Alipore, Jessore, Maldah, Dacca, Mymensingh, and Tipperah. In none of these latter jails, however (with the exception perhaps of Alipore), does the overcrowding appear to have affected the health of the prisoners. At Alipore, unless due to overcrowding, it is not easy to say to what cause the high percentage of sick should be attributed; and when we notice how closely the jail population generally during the last four years has approximated to the maximum available accommodation, we shall probably hesitate to deny that the rise in the mortality during those four years is to some extent due to overcrowding generally, though it may not be possible to specify the particular jail or jails which suffered from this cause. The act of grace of the 1st January last relieved our jails of some 3,000 prisoners, or one-seventh of their inmates; and without pretending to assert that this is the correct, or even sole explanation, it is undoubtedly the fact that so far this year the jails, as a whole, have been unusually healthy. For the first six months of the year the mortality was at the rate of 4·40 per cent. only, against 5·37 for the same period of 1876.

* The circumstances of the Russa and Baraset jails are exceptional. Russa, itself not built on the most approved sanitary principles, receives female convicts from all parts of Bengal; Baraset is the asylum for old and infirm prisoners from the other jails at the Presidency.

85. It remains to state what has been done during the year to improve the sanitary condition of some of the unhealthiest jails. At Julpigoree the jail has been abandoned, the prisoners have been removed to a new site on the bank of the Teesta, and estimates for temporary buildings have been sanctioned by Government. As regards the others, I arranged with General Nicolls that the Rungpore and Backergunge jails, as seeming to be the most urgent cases, should first be taken in hand. Projects for new double-storied barracks in these jails were lying before the Government, but owing to some delay in passing the estimates nothing further was done during the year. The plans and estimates have, however, since been sanctioned, and orders have issued for the commencement of the works. At Mozufferpore the site acquired for a new jail has been found to be in no way superior to the old site, and the convict camp stationed there has accordingly been withdrawn. It is believed that now that the large district of Tirhoot has been divided, the old district jail, with some alterations and additions, will be found sufficiently healthy, and that Government need not be put to the expense of building an entirely new jail. Sites were acquired for new jails at Chumparun and Gya some time ago, but nothing further has been done for want of funds. It has been stated above that the death-rate at Gya has much improved during the year under report.

VII.—INSPECTION AND MISCELLANEOUS.

86. From the records of this office, it would seem that the following 16 jails were inspected by Major Bowie during the year 1876 on the dates noted against each:—

Jails inspected by Major Bowie.

Hooghly	7th January.	Cuttack	9th February.
Russa	10th "	Pooree	12th "
Furreedpore	12th "	Bankoora	8th March.
Pubna	13th and 14th January.	Moorshedabad	16th "
Patna	21st January.	Beerbhoom	18th "
Shahabad	22nd "	Doomka	19th "
Bhagulpore central	24th "	Purneah	7th April and 8th June.
Burdwan	29th "	Darjeeling	18th-24th April.

I am not in a position to say that the above is a complete list of the jails visited by my predecessor during the year under report.

87. I myself took charge of the Department on the 2nd August, and was only able to inspect 7 jails, viz. Alipore, Presidency, Russa, Purneah, Darjeeling, Noakholly, and Backergunge, before the end of the year. The reason I was not able to inspect a larger number of jails that year was (1) that my first duty on taking charge was the preparation of the annual report for 1875, and (2) that I was appointed by Government at the end of October, in addition to my ordinary duties, to select, in communication with local officers, those prisoners who should be allowed to benefit by the act of imperial clemency of the 1st January last. This duty, involving as it did a mass of demi-official correspondence with Magistrates all over the country, necessarily tied me down to my head-quarters in Calcutta. The rolls submitted to me had to be checked and revised in compliance with the conditions laid down by the Government of India, and explanations and supplementary rolls not unfrequently had to be called for. This correspondence, moreover, had to be carried on confidentially, and the letters on the subject were generally written by my own hand. At the same time my office was crippled by the absence of my Personal Assistant on furlough. Thus during the month of December my own time was almost completely taken up in examining the rolls of eligible prisoners submitted by the Magistrates, and that of my establishment in making fair copies of those (between 9,000 and 10,000) selected for submission to Government. To complete this work my office had to be kept open during the special holidays granted by Government, while the ordinary correspondence naturally fell into arrear. At the beginning of the new year I contrived to pay a hasty visit to Midnapore, but on the 10th January the Prison Conference, to which I had been delegated by the Government (also in addition to my ordinary duties), commenced its sittings. The deliberations of the Conference lasted two months, and I was consequently (with the exception of another brief visit paid to Bhagulpore) unable to resume my inspection work till the middle of March. It was of course an unparalleled advantage to be associated in almost daily intercourse for a space of two months with many of the first authorities on jail questions in India; but as no assistance was allowed me, these additional duties naturally interfered with the despatch of business in my office and with my inspection work. I have, however, endeavoured to make up for lost time during the hot weather and rains, and up to date this year have succeeded in inspecting the following 32 jails:—

Burdwan.
Beerbhoom.
Midnapore district.
Ditto central.
Hooghly (twice).
Presidency (several times).
Alipore (several times).
Russa.
Nuddea.

Buxar.
Shahabad.
Mozufferpore.
Durbhunga.
Bhagulpore district.
Ditto central.
Purneah.
Hazareebagh central.
Ditto Penitentiary.
Lohardugga.

I have also inspected seven lockups, three lunatic asylums, and two military cells, within the same period.

89. Of the jails visited by Major Bowie in 1866, the following have not yet been inspected by me. The opinion given therefore is that of my predecessor, as gathered from his inspection remarks:—

Bankoora.—Discipline unsatisfactory. Classification misunderstood. Charges on the increase, and no profits from manufactures.

Cuttack.—Major Bowie "exceedingly well satisfied."

Pooree.—Labour tasks insufficient. Office in good order; well satisfied.

Doomka.—No remarks.

90. From the above it will be seen that the best jails in point of discipline and general management are the central jails and the district jails of—

Hooghly,
Moorsheadabad,
Dacca,

Patna,
Bhagulpore, and Cuttack.

On the other hand, the most unsatisfactory seem to me to be—

Bogra,
Pubna,
Julpigoree,

Fureedpore,
Backergunge, and Shahabad.

In some of these jails, I am glad to say, there has since been great improvement.

91. The following statement shows the number of visits by Magistrates and official visitors during the year 1876. It should be explained that these figures are taken from the Visitors' Book in each case, and that many Magistrates have been in the habit of visiting the jail without making an entry in the Visitors' Book:—

92. During the current year the Government has been pleased to relieve Mr. Donaldson, the superintendent of jail manufactures, of much work which tied him to Calcutta, and his services can now be utilized in inspecting and improving the labour arrangements in force in mofussil jails. Mr. Donaldson has already visited and reported on several jails, and I anticipate great good from his inspections in improved industrial activity and increased profits. The record of his work in this direction, however, will more fitly find a place in next year's report.

93. One of the most important events of the year under report was the promulgation of the new Jail Code, which had been under revision for some time previous. The revised Code receive the formal approval of Government in the month of June, but as copies were not available till quite the end of the year it was not brought into force generally till 1st January 1877. The new mark rules for European prisoners have not yet been introduced, as the recent Prison Conference has made some suggestions on the subject, and it seemed advisable to defer action until the orders of the Government of India should be known. As I had nothing whatever to do with the revision of the Code, I may be permitted to state here that as a whole it commended itself to the Prison Conference as one of the most complete and precise of all the provincial codes.

94. The new forms of registers and returns proscribed by the Code have been gradually brought into use. There was some delay at first in consequence of the non-receipt of the Code and the block in the Alipore Jail Press, and this delay threw some of the jail offices temporarily into arrear. It is a general subject of complaint, moreover, that the new forms are more intricate and involve more labour than those they superseded. This complaint, however, seems to be without foundation: the fact is that some superintendents have not yet taken the trouble to master the new books and system of accounts. When properly understood, they are found to be sufficiently simple, and there are certainly not more than one or two of the registers that could safely be dispensed with. On the other hand, the returns do seem to me to be too elaborate, and in some instances impracticable. For example, without taking a detailed census (which of course is not intended), it is quite impossible to make an accurate return of the length of time already passed in jail, or the ages of convicts in a jail at the end of each month. Even if the information on these points were correct and not misleading; as it must be at present, it is certainly not wanted once a month. It might usefully be collected once or perhaps twice a year, and then it should be done by means of a regular census. I should accordingly have proposed to revise and simplify some of the returns at present in use; but the Prison Conference having suggested some alterations in the statements prescribed by the Government of India, it seemed desirable to wait until our monthly and annual returns might at once be brought into accordance with those which may be finally approved by the Supreme Government.

95. The following superintendents deserve special credit in my opinion—
 Superintendents deserving of com- for the zeal and ability with which they have mendation. managed the jails under their charge:—

Dr. Lynch (Alipore).
 „ Mackenzie (Presidency).
 „ N. Jackson (Buxar).
 Captain Lillingston (Hazareebagh).
 A. D. Larmore, Esq. (Midnapore).
 G. M. Currie, Esq. (Dacca).
 Dr. E. C. Bensley (Rajshahye).
 „ Nicholson (Hooghly).

Dr. Shircore (Moorshedabad).
 „ Gregg (Jessore).
 „ Simpson (Patna).
 „ C. J. Jackson (Mozufferpore).
 „ Ghose (Rungpore).
 „ Stewart (Cuttack).
 „ Stork (Tipperah).
 „ Lyons (Noakholly).

I did not see much of Mr. Eyre's work at Bhagulpore, but he maintained the discipline introduced by Dr. Lethbridge, and was considered a good jail officer by my predecessor. He is no longer in the Government service.

96. Mr. Wilson, the deputy superintendent of the Alipore jail, continued to give satisfaction. Among the jailors the following deserve special commendation for their work during the year:—

T. H. Jennings, Presidency.
 G. D. Dobson, Buxar.
 C. Courtenay, Rajshahye.
 J. Winter, Hazareebagh Penitentiary.
 J. H. McAuliffe, Bhagulpore central.
 F. Kirschner, Russa.
 T. H. Nelson, Midnapore central.
 J. Sankey, Hooghly.
 Jagat Bundho Guha, Dacca.
 T. P. R. R. Holloway, Patna.
 J. Wilkerson, Hazareebagh central.
 J. W. Craggs, Bankoora.

Boidyanath Tripathi, Lohardugga.
 Dwarkanath Bhadra, Moorshedabad.
 Ram Chunder Ghose, Tipperah.
 W. Poring, Cuttack.
 Modhusoodan Dey, Dinagepore.
 J. Pimm, Jessore.
 Deb Kanto Roy, Midnapore district.
 Bisto Chunder Chatterjee, Bhagulpore district.
 Mahomed Hosain, Baraset.
 Raj Chunder Das, Noakholly.
 Russik Lall Bose, Darjeeling.

Three jailors (at Durbhunga, Maldah, and Manbhoom) were dismissed during the year, two (at Bogra and Rungpore) were degraded to subordinate positions in the department, and two (Bankoora and Pooree) resigned. Altogether ten new jailors were appointed during the year, and only one out of the ten had not had previous training in the department. Six jailors were promoted to higher grades during the year.

97. In conclusion, I desire to acknowledge the great assistance I have received in my office from Dr. S. S. Lynch, Deputy Inspector-General, and latterly from Mr. P. Donaldson, Superintendent of Jail Manufactures, and Mr. W. Leonard, my Personal Assistant.

I have the honor to be,

• Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

H. BEVERLEY,

Offg. Inspector-General of Jails, Bengal.

APPENDIX.

SANITARY AND MEDICAL REPORT.

No. 1031½, dated Fort William, the 23rd October 1877.

From—J. FULLARTON BEATSON, Esq., M.D., Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Dept.
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial Department.

I HAVE the honor to submit the sanitary and medical chapter of the jails situated in the province of Bengal for incorporation in the Administration Report of the Inspector-General of Jails for the year 1876.

2. I have, as in last year, prepared this summary from the reports received from medical officers in charge of jails; and I have endeavoured to bring to the notice of Government such insanitary defects as were considered deleterious to the health of the prisoners confined in each jail of the ten divisions under the heads of capacity, ventilation, food, water-supply, drainage, conservancy arrangements, clothing, and labour.

3. From all I know of the judicious discipline exercised by the Medical Superintendents, with regard especially to the hygienic management of jails, I still entertain the opinion I deliberately expressed last year, that the sanitary defects and consequent sickness brought to light depend chiefly on causes which are irremediable under present circumstances, such as badly constructed jails, situated in localities which are acknowledged to be unhealthy. Much has been effected during the year under report by efficient drainage; greater attention to the ventilation, especially of the sleeping apartments; apportioning labour according to physical capability; the supply of a more suitable description of sleeping places, &c.: but greater improvements, in the aggregate, can only be anticipated when some of the jail buildings are entirely remodelled, others done away with altogether, and new and well-ventilated structures raised in their stead in healthy localities better suited to accommodate and maintain in health the criminal population of the district.

4. The marginal statement represents the divisions and the number of jails included in each. The only changes noticeable in the totals under each head from last year are in the Presidency, Dacca, and Patna divisions, owing to the transfer of the Moorshedabad jail from the Rajshahye to the Presidency, and the inclusion of the Tipperah and Durbhunga jails in the Dacca and Patna divisions respectively.

5. At the conclusion of the following summary of medical officers' sanitary reports, I shall offer some remarks, without entering into details of a professional nature, regarding the general health of the prison population, with special reference to overcrowding, ventilation, drainage, conservancy, &c., and their probable effect in swelling the number of admissions into hospital for those disorders which are common to a tropical climate:—

BURDWAN DIVISION.

Burdwan.
Bankoora.
Beerbhoom.

Midnapore central.
" district.
Hooghly.

6. The convict wards of the Burdwan jail were overcrowded during the months of April and May 1876, owing to the accommodation of prisoners who were being transferred from the Hooghly to the Hazareebagh jail when excessive sickness at the latter institution rendered it inexpedient to admit a large number of prisoners who were probably in a weakly and anæmic state of health. In the Hooghly jail there was considerable overcrowding during the greater part of the year, which in the month of June became excessive. The average number confined during that month was 719, the wards and cells being capable of accommodating only 595 prisoners with any comfort. With these two exceptions, it is gratifying to notice that the dwelling space in the jails of this division was ample; while the ventilation left but little to be desired.

Drainage.

7. The drainage is reported as effective, and in most jails was capable of readily carrying off the surface water after the heaviest showers.

Conservancy.

8. The dry earth system of conservancy was in force in all the jails of the Burdwan division, and no instances are reported of its having proved inefficient in removing all unpleasant smell and preserving the atmosphere pure and wholesome. The Superintendent of the Hooghly jail considers that as the jail is rather limited for the proper working of this system a pug-mill should be supplied to more thoroughly ensure the mixing of the excreta with earth previous to its removal; while the Medical Officer of the Burdwan jail reports that two day-prives are urgently required to keep separate the various classes of prisoners who are now obliged to use the same latrine for purposes of nature. Regarding the plan adopted in the Burdwan jail of making all the prisoners resort to the hospital latrine during the daytime—a practice which I last year characterized as objectionable—Mr. Oubert thus expresses himself: “I did not sufficiently explain that the use of the hospital latrine between the hours of 8 A.M. and 4 P.M. is limited to men who have diarrhoea, and who are at once in consequence admitted into hospital. Such men as are in good health, and who merely ask to go to the latrine to get away from their work through laziness or contempt of rules, are reported by the native doctor and punished in some slight way.”

Cleanliness.

9. The cleanliness of the jail premises was well attended to, the Superintendents taking particular care that the prisoners kept their clothes and persons clean.

Employment—effect on health.

10. The prisoners were employed on the usual labour connected with prison life; and as inspections were frequently made to see whether the work allotted to each was or was not suited to his physical capability, no report has been made that in any instance the health of the prisoners was prejudicially affected. In my sanitary chapter of last year, I brought prominently to notice the fact of the strong and weak prisoners of the Midnapore jail being indiscriminately employed in the same manner. It is very satisfactory to find that the practice has been discontinued during the past year, the weakly in constitution and the more advanced in years being employed on that labour only in the performance of which the least possible amount of energy was expended.

Diet.

11. The quality of the provisions supplied was reported as good, and the quantity ample. The authorized jail scale was always in use except when bowel complaints necessitated the suspension of dhal and other articles of diet which caused intestinal irritation. An extra milk ration was supplied to the aged and infirm in the Burdwan jail with salutary effects. No cases of scurvy were admitted into hospital for treatment. Regarding some cases of spongy gums in the Hooghly jail, Dr. Gregg thus writes: “I noticed many cases of spongy gums among the prisoners, and especially among the prisoners newly admitted into jail. This state of matters I hold not to be scurvy, or to depend on the same causes as tend to produce that disease, though I deem it to be an illustration of faulty nutrition. It is chiefly, I think, caused by faulty assimilation, and depends on such disorders of the economy as induce anæmia. Good food and antiscorbutics alone will not cure the condition, but if remedies for the cure of the anæmia and the disordered state it depends on are exhibited, and tone is given to the digestive organs, I have no doubt that good food is advantageous, for then it can be assimilated and yield proper nourishment to the body.”

Water-supply.

12. The water-supply is reported on as having been abundant for all purposes, and of good quality. Well water was used in most of the jails for drinking purposes. In the Hooghly jail the prisoners used river water, which after filtration was found to be free from any impurities likely to cause sickness.

Clothing.

13. The clothing and bedding supplied during the year was of the material sanctioned by regulation, and was considered by Superintendents as of good quality and well suited to the climate and the duties the prisoners had to perform. In the Hooghly, Midnapore central and district jails, extra blankets and blanket kurtas were supplied to the aged and debilitated prisoners, and in some cases the indulgence was extended to those engaged in weaving, spinning, and other sedentary occupations.

PRESIDENCY DIVISION.

Presidency, Europeans.
 " Natives.
 Alipore.
 Russa.

Baraset.
 Nuddea.
 Jessore.
 Moorshedabad.

14. The ventilation in most of the jails of this division, which was far from satisfactory last year, has been considerably improved either by roof ventilation or by openings in the doors and shutters at the top; while overcrowding has been prevented in a great measure by the transfer of prisoners from one jail to another. It is reported that there has been some overcrowding among the native prisoners in the Presidency jail during the months of February, May, and June, when the excess was relieved by the transfer of 68 prisoners in the month following. Regarding the wards and hospital accommodation, the Superintendent of the Nuddea jail writes as follows: "The jail has been slightly overcrowded throughout the year, but if comparison be made by the new scale it shows that the overcrowding has been fearful. Looking, however, to the past year's statistics as the most practical test, we find that it has done no harm whatever, and that the mortality was considerably below that of the past two years." In the Alipore jail, which was overcrowded in October 1876 by 251 souls, the daily average population of all classes was estimated as 2,140.6, while the wards were capable of accommodating 2,225 inmates. There was consequently no overcrowding as a rule. As the improvements in the ventilation of the upper story of the criminal wards in the Alipore jail have not been carried out by the Public Works Department, I would strongly recommend that the project may be taken in hand as soon as practicable. In no other jails of this division has overcrowding to any noticeable extent been reported by the officers in medical charge.

15. The drainage of the jails is considered as effective. All the surface water was carried off rapidly into tanks, nullahs, and other receptacles, and where any accumulation was apparent means were at once adopted to carry off any water lodging about the compound, and thus preventing its percolation through the soil.

Conservancy.

16. The conservancy arrangements have been well attended to, and I have no remarks to offer under this head.

Employment.

17. The employment was of the usual nature, and no prisoners are reported as having suffered either from the nature or the amount of the work allotted to each. The Assistant Surgeon in charge of the Baraset jail reports that some of the old and weakly prisoners suffered from rheumatic pains and catarrh, the result of exposure to cold in the mornings of the winter season; but he does not mention whether the labour was or could have been varied, so as to render them less liable to these distressing complaints.

18. The diet was according to the jail scale, and was both varied and sufficient for all purposes. The provisions were well cooked, and no complaints were made to the Superintendents of the allowance being less than the sanctioned amount. Scurvy, which appeared in the Alipore jail during the latter end of 1875, decreased in January 1876, but reappeared again slightly in November of that year. The total number admitted into hospital for this complaint was 21 during the twelve months. In no other jails in this division did scurvy come under the cognizance of the medical superintendents.

Diet.

19. The water-supply was chiefly from wells and tanks, and was considered as whole some. In the Moorshedabad jail the prisoners used the water of the river Bhagiruthee, while the municipal water was supplied to the Presidency jail. During the early part of the year the tank in the enclosure of the Russa jail, which was used for drinking purposes exclusively, became so foul and loaded with putrid vegetable matter that the medical officer resolved at once to resort to a tank within the jail grounds (but outside the enclosing wall), and with satisfactory results. The tank water of the Alipore jail is wholesome, but is rather saline in taste.

Water-supply.

20. The clothing was according to the scale authorized in the new jail manual, and was considered as suitable for all seasons. The Assistant Surgeon in charge of the Baraset jail, however, considers the winter clothing as insufficient in the coldest months of the year for those prisoners who work outside the jail garden and are exposed to the northern blasts.

Clothing.

RAJSHAHYE DIVISION.

Dinapore.
Maldah.
Rajshahye.

Rungpore.
Bogra.
Pubna.

21. The ventilation in most of the jails of the Rajshahye division is reported as satisfactory; there was more or less overcrowding in the Dinapore jail during four months of the year; and in the criminal wards of the Maldah jail, which are only capable of accommodating 47 prisoners, the number sheltered in July equalled 97. Regarding the ventilation and capacity of the Pubna jail the medical officer reports as follows: "The jail is a most insecure and unsatisfactory building, of insufficient capacity, badly ventilated, and constantly more or less overcrowded. The sleeping wards are raised above the surrounding level, but still are more or less damp during the rains; the roofs also are low, and the wards badly ventilated." The mortality, it may be remarked, of this institution was 13.99 per cent. of the average strength, and indicates a very high death-rate in comparison with the other jails of this division, Rungpore excepted.

Ventilation and capacity.

22. The drainage of the Dinapore jail is reported as being defective, in consequence of the superficial saucer drains "with bad outflow;" and I may here remark that the state of the drains was brought unfavourably to the notice of Government last year. The drains of the Malda jail, both inside and outside, except certain portions, are kutcha; while the pukka portions have been so long out of repair as to be inadequate for the purpose of quickly carrying off surface water. The medical officer of the Rajshahye jail reports that the drains have been sunk so deep as to be on a level with the outside receiving drain, and the consequence is that the water not running off quickly sinks through the permeable soil into the compound, which remains damp for a considerable time after the surrounding ground has become dry through evaporation. There is nothing to note regarding the other jails under this head.

Drainage.

23. The prisoners were employed on labour suited to their state of health and physical fitness, and no report is made of their having suffered in any way from the work required. The food supplied to the prisoners was considered good, wholesome, and sufficiently nutritious. In the Pubna jail a few cases of scurvy occurred, but no prisoners were admitted into hospital for treatment. Dr. Ghose, the Superintendent of the Rungpore jail, has offered some very interesting and instructive remarks on the treatment he adopted in the case of those who were found suffering from scurvy, or from what he considers as malarious cachexia, but the limited space at my disposal precludes their reproduction.

Labour and diet.

24. The water-supply was obtained from wells, tanks, and rivers, and no complaint has been made of its unsuitableness either for drinking or washing purposes. The prisoners bathe regularly, so that the cleanliness of their persons was thoroughly ensured.

Water-supply.

25. The clothing issued appeared to be sufficient, as no report has been made of the prisoners suffering in health from being underclad, either in the rains or during the coldest months of the winter season.

Clothing.

COOCH BEHAR.

Darjeeling.

Julpigoree.

26. The wards of both the Darjeeling and Julpigoree jails were well ventilated, and no overcrowding took place during the year under review. The building which was intended as a hospital for the prisoners of the Darjeeling jail, and which was reported on last year as ill-ventilated, dark, and gloomy, was vacated, and the civil ward used for the treatment of the sick, with a very marked improvement in the health of the inmates.

Capacity and ventilation.

27. The drainage was in either jail considered good and effective. The conservancy arrangements of the Julpigoree jail were on the dry earth system. The privies consist of small bamboo platforms with earthen pans, and are kept clean and free from offensive odour. The day latrines of the Darjeeling jail are reported on by the Civil Surgeon as defective, both in point of ventilation and general construction; but the project of improvement in both respects will be undertaken as soon as sufficient funds are available for the purpose.

Drainage and conservancy.

28. The labour did not prove, in the opinion of the Superintendent, inimical to health; in fact the Civil Surgeon of Darjeeling reports that owing to the strictness of the rules regarding the employment of prisoners, who in any respect are unable to stand the exposure of extramural labour, some men have to sit idle when incapable through constitutional disability of working in the open air.

29. The diet was according to the Jail Code, and was regarded as nutritious, sufficient, and tolerably varied. Regarding the scorbutic taint among the jail population at Julpigoree, the Civil Surgeon writes as follows: "Upwards of 70 per cent. of the prisoners on admission were found to suffer from scurvy. Some exhibited it in the form of swollen gums and loose teeth, others in an unhealthy dry appearance of skin and oedema of the cellular tissue; splenic enlargements were also probably present in about one-third of the cases. It is difficult to determine whether the condition is originally due to malnutrition or to malarial poisoning. In the case of the prisoners a marked change for the better was observed in their health when a satisfactory inspection of the dieting could be held."

30. The water-supply for drinking purposes in the Julpigoree and Darjeeling jails was wholesome and abundant throughout the year. In the former institution the water of the river Teesta was used, and in the latter the source of supply was from natural springs.

31. The clothing was considered sufficient, but the medical officer of the Darjeeling jail thinks that during the cold season it would be advisable to allow the prisoners blanket coats of the new Behar scale, as the ordinary blankets rolled round the body give the prisoners an ungainly appearance and impede the arms, especially when they are engaged in out-door labour.

DACCA DIVISION.

Dacca.
Furreedpore.
Backergunge.

Mymensingh.
Tipperah.

32. Overcrowding has been reported in the Dacca and Mymensingh jails—in the former institution during the greater part of the year, and in the latter during the months of November and December, but no injurious results were noticeable. Regarding the state of the Backergunge jail in respect to the state of the buildings, the surroundings and ventilation, I subjoin the following extract from the sanitary report: "The jail is placed in the centre of the bazars, and is almost surrounded by tidal khalls, ditches, and tanks. In consequence of the raised plinth being of earth, the wards are constantly damp. Damp ascends to the height of six feet during the rains. Ventilation is not satisfactory."

33. The drainage system of all the jails of the Dacca division worked efficiently, and no improvements were reported as desirable. The conservancy was carried out on the dry earth system, and was well attended to.

34. The labour on which the prisoners were employed was of the ordinary nature, and had no ill effects on their health.

35. The diet issued was according to scale, and was considered sufficient for all the jails with the exception of Furreedpore. The Superintendent reports that owing to the scarcity of vegetables and fish at certain seasons of the year changes have to be made in the diet, which is anything but favourable to the health of the prisoners. Of the 871 prisoners released from this jail at the end of the year, 183 gained in weight, 371 lost, and 317 neither gained nor lost. The average loss per head was about $2\frac{1}{2}$ chittacks; but I am not sure whether this figure represents the ratio of loss to length of incarceration. The medical officer of the Mymensingh jail writes as follows regarding scurvy: "Although only two cases of scurvy are shown in the return as having been treated in hospital for that disease, a large proportion of the prisoners are suffering from it. * * * At a careful medical inspection of the prisoners on the 20th February it was found that out of 447 convicted prisoners 127 were more or less scorbutic, and that in only 12 of these did the affection appear to have been contracted in jail. These were men who were sentenced in 1872, and it is very possible that the presence of scorbutic symptoms may have been overlooked when they were admitted into jail. It appears that the number found to be affected in 1876 was 258, or 25 per cent. To the acknowledged existing causes, monotony of diet and imperfectly nutritious food, another influence which has acted of late years is the high price of all the common articles of food. "On the last day of the year out of 522 prisoners 122 were found to be scorbutic."

36. Drinking water was obtained in the Mymensingh jail from the river Brahmaputra, and was carefully filtered previous to use. In the Water-supply.

Backergunge jail river water was used, and was found pure and free from organic matter. In the Tipperah jail the water in the old tank, which was set apart for drinking purposes, somewhat deteriorated in quality, and resort was had to another tank within the jail precincts, which the medical officer thinks will supply water of a better quality.

37. Clothing in all the jails of this division was found ample for all purposes except in the Furreedpore and Tipperah jails. The Superintendent of the former institution considers that the junghias, both for decency and protection of the body, "ought to come down to above the knees at least," and the medical officer of the latter institution reports "that the clothing is sufficient for summer but very inadequate for winter."

Clothing.

CHITTAGONG DIVISION.

Chittagong.

Noakholly.

38. There was no overcrowding in the Chittagong jail, and the medical officer considers the ventilation as good. Regarding the wards and hospital of the Noakholly jail, the Superintendent reports as follows: "The floors of all these buildings are, I fear, irremediably damp, and it is with the greatest difficulty and labour that some appearance of dryness is obtained; prisoners being constantly employed in shaving off the surface earth to keep down green damp as well as oxidised nitrogenous products of the soil, which on the drier spots here and there shew up in white patches." The ventilation also of this jail is considered defective, as there is no roof ventilation; but Mr. Lyons proposes to insert bent earthenware or tin tubes through the roofs, so as to allow of a freer ingress and egress of air. The hospital for the treatment of the sick prisoners at Noakholly is reported to be "insufficiently lighted, damp, and requiring more ventilation, and has the latrine placed objectionably close to it."

Ventilation and capacity.

39. The drainage is reported as efficient. The dry earth system of conservancy was in force in both the jails of this division, and the cleanliness of the latrines and compound was well attended to.

Drainage and conservancy.

40. The labour on which the prisoners were engaged did not affect their health in any way, even though at Noakholly some were employed after the cyclone in clearing the roads of fallen trees, removing records and furniture from the catcherry, and other extramural labour.

Employment—effect on health.

41. The quality of the diet both at Chittagong and Noakholly was considered good and sufficient in quantity. At the former jail, of the 490 prisoners discharged during the year 73 were long term and

Diet.

417 short term. Of the 73 long term prisoners 20 gained an average weight of 15·1 chittacks each, and in three no change was noticeable. Of the 417 short term, or those discharged after an incarceration of 1 year and under, 79 gained an average weight of 5·6 chittacks, 218 lost an average weight of 5·95 each, and 120 neither gained nor lost. Regarding cases of scurvy in the Noakholly jail the medical officer reports as follows: "Scurvy, as far as applies to its presence in the appearance of spongy, hæmorrhagic, and retracted gums, loose teeth and fetid breath, was somewhat common at the time I took over charge; and to those who suffered preparations of iron, lime juice, fresh limes, with additional vegetables, were given. These cases continued to occur, but principally amongst new prisoners, who were similarly treated without requiring detention in hospital."

42. Well water was used in the Chittagong jail, while the drinking water of the Noakholly jail was obtained from tanks. The supply was good and abundant throughout the year.

Water-supply.

43. The clothing supplied to the prisoners of the Chittagong jail was of good quality and well suited to the duties the men had to perform. The medical officer of the Noakholly jail reports that the ordinary

Clothing.

dosootes kurta issued in the winter season is not sufficient to protect the prisoners against the damp and cold of December and January. The junghia also is, in his opinion, not long enough, nor of sufficiently warm material to protect the loins in those months of the year when bowel complaints are of such frequent occurrence.

PATNA DIVISION.

Meeta pore.	Tirhoot.
Dehree convict camp.	Sarun.
Gya.	Chumparun.
Shahabad.	Durbhunga.

44. It is satisfactory to report that no overcrowding occurred during the year in the Sarun, Durbhunga, and Tirhoot jails. No overcrowding took place in the Meeta pore jail, but the Superintendent reports as follows regarding the buildings, &c.: "The wards are constructed of brick and, with the exception of one (No. 12) and the hospital, the roofs are constructed of bamboo frame work, covered with burnt tiles with large openings at the top for ventilation. These latter are protected above by small roofs of similar construction, but these do not overlap the openings sufficiently, the consequence being that in heavy falls of rain, accompanied with wind, the rain penetrates into the wards in considerable quantities, flooding the floor and rendering the beds in the vicinity uninhabitable for the time being."

Overcrowding and ventilation.

45. The drainage system worked efficiently, and no water lodged about the compound. The cleanliness of the latrines was well attended to.

Labour.

46. The labour on which the prisoners were engaged was of the usual nature, and no ill effects were noticed by the Superintendents in consequence.

Diet.

47. The diet was according to the new jail manual, and was considered sufficient and of excellent quality. The medical officer of the Chumparun jail reports that on the examination of the entire jail population in March last he found that 28 per cent. showed evidences of a scorbutic taint, but that by the exhibition of lime juice and vegetables the number so affected soon dwindled to 20 per cent. On the 25th October there were only 5 per cent. suffering, and the affected men were for the most part those who had been lately imprisoned.

Water-supply.

48. The water for drinking purposes has been taken from wells, and was of good quality. The well water was not considered good in the Tirhoot jail, as it contained a large quantity of carbonate of lime. At one time, when the water in the wells was only 18 inches from the bottom, drinking water was obtained from the river, and was after filtration found to be pure and free from any organic or vegetable matter.

Clothing.

49. The clothing is reported as ample for all seasons in the Gya, Shahabad, Tirhoot, and Sarun jails. In the Pubna jail the medical officer simply notes the quantity of summer and winter clothing issued to the prisoners, but offers no remarks as to its sufficiency or suitability for preserving the body from damp and chill. The medical officer of the Chumparun jail considers the clothing as insufficient for the winter months; while the Superintendent of the Dehree convict camp thinks the junghias should be made longer, so as to afford more protection to the thighs.

BHAGULPORE DIVISION.

Monghyr.	Purneah.
Bhagulpore, central.	Nya Doomka.
" district.

50. No overcrowding occurred among the prisoners in the Bhagulpore central and Monghyr jails, but in all the other jails of this division for limited periods the numbers confined exceeded the accommodation according to standard plan. The ventilation was considered defective in wards Nos. 5, 6, 7, and 8 of the Monghyr jail. No alteration has been made in the buildings of the Bhagulpore district jail, and the ventilation of its wards remains in the same imperfect state as reported last year.

Drainage and conservancy.

51. The drainage system of all the jails of the Bhagulpore division worked efficiently. The dry earth system of conservancy was in force in all the jails, and calls for no remarks. In the Bhagulpore central jail the latrine attached to the ward is considered unsafe by the medical officer; while he reports that a large piete of the compound towards the north of the jail is in a very unsightly and unsatisfactory state, owing to the difficulty of draining it properly, and to its being used for purposes of nature by the constables and warders in spite of the closest watch exercised.

52. The diet was according to regulation, and in no jail of this division did it prove insufficient in quantity. One case of scurvy was reported in the Bhagulpore district jail. I have no remarks to offer under the heads of water-supply and clothing.

Diet, water-supply, &c.

ORISSA DIVISION.

Cuttack.

Pooree.

Balasore.

53. No overcrowding among the prisoners of the Orissa division was reported. The female and hajut wards of the Cuttack jail are "defectively constructed and have no ventilation on two sides."

Capacity and ventilation.

54. The drains of the Cuttack and Pooree jails worked well during the year. The medical officer of the Balasore jail reports that "the building is encompassed with capacious pukka drains leading considerably beyond the jail walls to the extreme limits of the jail garden. The level of the enclosure, however, is not uniform, causing stagnating pools."

Drainage.

Conservancy, diet, &c.

55. There is nothing of importance to notice under conservancy, diet, and water-supply.

CHOTA NAGPORE DIVISION.

Hazareebagh, Europeans.
district and central.
Lohardugga.

Singbhoom.
Manbhoom.

56. The remarks which I made last year under capacity of the jail buildings, ventilation, drainage, water-supply, &c., with regard to the European Penitentiary at Hazareebagh, well apply to the year under review. Regarding the state of the buildings of the Hazareebagh central jail I subjoin the following extract from the excellent report of Dr. Birch: "The ventilation is good, indeed too good in the kutchah wards during the cold weather, for they are not provided with shutters, which I think they ought to be supplied with. * * The hospital accommodation was found frequently insufficient during the year on account of the exceptionally large amount of sickness which prevailed, but overcrowding of the hospital wards was obviated, though not without inconvenience, by treating the more trivial cases as out-patients. In speaking of the insufficiency of hospital accommodation, it should be explained that one of the wards has had to be used as an office and dispensary." The wards and hospital of the Lohardugga jail were dark and gloomy, but the ventilation is free. The slight overcrowding in the months of September and October was relieved by the permission granted to some of the well-conducted prisoners to sleep in the verandah. The medical officer of the Singbhoom jail reports that the ventilation of the jail on the whole is good, with the exception of the female wards and hospital, where there may be said to be no ventilation when it is necessary to close the doors in the rainy season and in the cold weather. In the Manbhoom jail the prisoners were very favourably circumstanced in regard to capacity and ventilation.

57. The drainage was good in all the jails. The conservancy arrangements also worked efficiently. In the Lohardugga jail, however, the only one day latrine in use is "faulty in construction and totally inadequate for the wants of the prisoners (only one prisoner being able to use it at a time) who are frequently kept waiting for a long time for their turn."

58. The food-supply was according to scale, and was of good quality. The water used for drinking purposes was chiefly obtained from wells, and was favourably reported on.

Diet and water-supply.

59. I have now concluded the summary of the sanitary conditions affecting the jail population of the Lower Provinces of Bengal, and hope I have not omitted to mention such points of importance as may be considered to influence injuriously the sickness and increase the mortality of any jail.

60. The following paragraphs will be devoted to the examination of the sickness and mortality of the prisoners. The figured statements, I may remark, only represent the convict population, and have been compiled from the statistical records forwarded to my office on the 25th September by the Inspector-General of Jails.

61. It will be observed from the foregoing table that the total criminal population was in excess of the previous year by 268.53. The admissions per cent. of mean strength was 128.56, and was less by .72 than that of 1875. The admissions of males remained almost the same as in the previous year, but the decrease in the sickness of the females was very marked—a circumstance which it is pleasant to note.

62. The mortality of the year under report exceeded that of 1875 by 192 convicts, for though showing a decrease in the number of females of 14 there was an increase in the male prisoners of 206. The deaths per cent. of mean strength were a little higher than those represented in 1875, while the ratio of sick per cent. was lower by about .04.

Comparison of statistics from 1871 to 1876.

63. In statement No. 2 is shown the strength and the percentage of strength to admissions and deaths in the jails of the province of Bengal from 1871 to 1876.

STATEMENT No. 2.

Years.	Average strength.	Per cent. of strength.
		Admissions.	Deaths.
1871	16,627	125	4.12
1872	18,239	117.67	5.33
1873	19,430	123.26	4.90
1874	19,547	135.39	5.69
1875	19,563	129.29	5.04
1876	19,832	128.56	5.93

64. From this statement it will be gathered that the admissions of convicts per cent. of strength were somewhat lower than they were in 1875, but higher by 2.44 than the average of the five preceding years. The death-rate calculated on the same basis was, as remarked before, greater than that of 1875, and higher by .92 than the death average for the past quinquennial period. The average strength was higher by 1,151 convicts than that of the average from 1871 to 1875.

65. Statement No. 3 exhibits the accommodation which those jails afford to male and female convict prisoners in which overcrowding was noticed. It will be observed that in 26 jails the convict wards were more or less in excess of the sanctioned accommodation. The overcrowding was very marked among males in the Alipore, Rungpore, Jessore, Mozufferpore, Patna; Dacca, and Manbhoom jails. The excess of strength over capacity for female prisoners occurred in the Sarun, Nuddea, and Pubna jails.

67. The inference drawn from the foregoing table is that the Presidency division ranks first in order of sickness and tenth in order of mortality; Cooch Behar division occupied the second place for sickness and first for mortality; the Burdwan division stands third with respect to sickness and seventh to mortality; Chota Nagpore, fourth for sickness and second for mortality; Chittagong division, fifth for sickness and eighth for mortality; Rajshahye, sixth for sickness and third for mortality; Dacca division, seventh for sickness and fifth for mortality; Patna division, eighth for sickness and fourth for mortality; Bhagulpore, ninth for sickness and ninth for mortality; and the Orissa division, tenth for sickness and sixth for mortality.

Position of the jails in respect to sickness and mortality.

68. The rate per cent. of admissions to strength varied from 82.02 in Orissa to the high figure of 186.22 in the Presidency division. The average admission rate for the whole year was 128.56, and bears very favourable comparison with the sickness of the native army in the Presidency and eastern frontier districts, which is represented as 160.92 and 156.16 respectively of mean strength present. The death-rate calculated on the average strength varied from 3.37 in the Presidency to 17.13 in the Cooh Behar division, and it is worthy of remark that the latter division occupied the same unsatisfactory place in respect to mortality during 1876.

69. The total death-rate of male convict prisoners for all the jails was 5.90 per cent. of mean strength, while that of females was 6.83. The mortality of the male prisoners ranged from 1.38 in the Beerbhoom jail to 23.30 at Julpigoree. The mortality of the female prisoners reached from 2.72 at Moorshedabad to the very high figure of 92.99 in the Hooghly jail. In the following statement is shown the death-rate of female prisoners, and the remarks which I made last year will apply to the present figures.

Fevers contributed 32.29 per cent. of total admissions (comprising 29.54 per cent. of intermittent and 2.75 of the remittent and continued types) during the year; cholera, 2.02; scrofula and phthisis, .94; anæmia and general debility, 2.43; lung diseases, 3.78; dysentery and diarrhœa, 28.63; jaundice, .32; boils and ulcers, 3.99.

71. During the year there were admitted into hospital 56 cases of small-pox, viz. 20 in the Presidency division, 15 in Rajshahye and Cooch Behar, 1 in Chittagong, 10 in Patna, 5 in Bhagulpore, and 5 in Chota Nagpore. The number of deaths registered was 3. This result bears very unfavourable comparison with the year 1875, as out of a jail population of 20,183 only seven cases occurred during the 12 months of that year.

72. The total admissions from cholera for the year were 515, with 255 deaths, forming 2.02 per cent. of total admissions and 21.64 of the total convict mortality. In 1875 there were only 185 cases with 88 deaths. Cholera was met with in the following divisions:—Chota Nagpore, 6.35 per cent. of mean strength; Chittagong, 4.01; Rajshahye and Cooch Behar, 3.40; Orissa, 3.23; Burdwan, 2.40; Dacca, 2.10; Bhagulpore, 1.18; Presidency, 0.57; and Patna .40. The jails in the Chittagong, Orissa, and Chota Nagpore divisions escaped the pestilence altogether.

73. Fevers prevailed in every division. The Burdwan division stands first, having 69.64 per cent. based on the average mean strength. The Presidency comes next, showing 58.21. In the Chittagong division the proportion was 43.45. The mortality from fevers was highest in the Rajshahye and Cooch Behar and Chota Nagpore divisions, being .90 per cent. of mean strength. In the Dacca division the percentage was .60; in Bhagulpore, .56; in the Presidency, .44; and in Burdwan, .41.

74. Scrofula and phthisis pulmonalis contributed 240 admissions and 96 deaths, or at the rate of .94 per cent. of total admissions and 8.15 of total mortality. These diseases were most prevalent in Rajshahye and Cooch Behar, Presidency, and Burdwan divisions; while the mortality per cent. of mean strength was highest in Rajshahye and Cooch Behar, Burdwan and Presidency divisions. In the Orissa division no cases were admitted into hospital for treatment.

75. Respiratory diseases contributed 3.78 of total admissions and 8.40 of total mortality. They were most prevalent in the jails of the Chittagong, Rajshahye and Cooch Behar, Presidency, Burdwan, and Dacca divisions. The mortality was highest in the Rajshahye and Cooch Behar, Presidency, and Patna divisions, being 1.09 per cent. of strength for the first and .55 per cent. for each of the other two.

76. Bowel complaints, including dysentery and diarrhoea, formed 28.63 per cent. of the total admissions and 36.67 of the total mortality. The admissions in the Presidency, Chota Nagpore, Patna, Dacca, and Rajshahye and Cooch Behar divisions were 49.22, 39.29, 38.15, 37.44, and 33.06 respectively, calculated on the average strength. The mortality was highest in the Chota Nagpore division, being 3.69 of mean strength.

77. Statement No. 6 exhibits the death-rates per cent. of mean strength among the convicts in the jails for the years 1873, 1874, 1875, and 1876. Nineteen jails show a mortality above the average rate of 5.93. In seven the death-rate was over 10 per cent. of strength.

Note.—Jails printed in italics have less than 100 prisoners; jails in ordinary type, less than 400; jails in capitals, over 400. In all cases they are entered according to their average strength for the year 1876.

Julpigoree again heads the list with a mortality rate of 23.46. There were 13 deaths from cholera, one from fever, one from scrofula and phthisis, and 12 from bowel complaints, out of a total strength of 123.60 convicts. There was a severe epidemic of cholera in this jail during the month of May 1876, which no doubt helped to swell considerably the sickness and mortality. The insanitary conditions which were brought to light last year under defective ventilation, quality of the articles of diet, clothing and water-supply, had not been unfavourably reported on this year: in fact the Superintendent thinks that the general health of the prison population "may be considered to have been tolerably good, and much in advance of what it was in the previous year, excluding the influence of cholera. This condition appears to have been maintained throughout the district as well as in the jail."

78 Dr. Irving, the Deputy Surgeon-General of the Dinapore circle, who inspected the Julpigoree jail on the 30th October 1876, reports as follows regarding the general condition of the inmates: "The prisoners on admission are nearly always in a very bad state of health. Of this I satisfied myself by a reference to the admission book, in which the phrases 'anæmia, enlarged spleen, unhealthy,' frequently appear in the column filled in by the medical officer."

79. In the Rungpore jail the deaths among the convicted population were from the following causes:—six from remittent fever, one from inter-mittent fever, 34 from scrofula and phthisis pulmonalis, four from diseases of the respiratory system, 27 from dysentery and diarrhoea, out of an average strength of 495.28 prisoners. The only insanitary condition, irrespective of the site of the jail, which has been reported as acting prejudicially on the health of the inmates by the Superintendent, was that the night-prives in use are defective in construction, and consequently vitiate the atmosphere of the sleeping apartments. The sickness and mortality of the present year, Dr. Ghose, however, attributes rather to climatic influence, which keeps the population in a diseased condition.

80. Mr. Cockburn, the Deputy Surgeon-General of the Presidency circle, inspected the Rungpore jail on the 27th February 1876, and reports as follows: "The jail is situated at the west end of the station, and is surrounded by swampy grounds; but as this is the case with the whole station and town, it would be difficult to find a better position until some means are devised for draining the swamps."

81. In the Chumparun jail there were 11 deaths from cholera, four from scrofula and phthisis, one from anæmia and general debility, one from lung diseases, and nine from dysentery and diarrhoea. The medical officer considers the clothing issued for the winter months as insufficient, and writes as follows regarding the general health of the prisoners: "The general health of the prisoners has been very unfavourable as compared with the three previous years. The increase in the sickness and death-rate coincides with the increased death-rate, and therefore presumably increased sickness all over the district."

82. Dr. Irving visited this jail on the 22nd of December 1876, and reports as follows: "The most superficial glance will tell any one that its inmates must be unhealthy, which they are, have always been, and are likely to be. * * The present jail is absolutely unfit for the habitation of prisoners, unless for such as have been capitally convicted and sentenced."

83. It will not be necessary to examine further the causes, whether natural or preventable, which caused the high mortality in the other jails whose death-rate was over 10 per cent of strength. From a perusal of the medical officers' sanitary reports, I am of opinion that every care has been taken to provide for the welfare and comfort of the prison population, and, so far as the experience of the past year goes, it can safely be deduced that no epidemic of cholera or fever occurred among the inmates of a jail without the neighbourhood having been affected to a like extent, and that the proportion of sick to strength within jail boundaries bears favourable comparison with the 'free' population of large crowded towns, although higher considerably than the sickness and mortality of the general rural population.

				PENAL DIET. §
			14½ 15½	For Europeans, Eurasians, Natives of the Upper Provinces and Punjab, Chinaman, Malays, and Burmese:—	Hooghly Jail ... { 2½ chs. of fish instead of 2 chs. were given to labouring prisoners throughout the year, the extra ¼ being an allowance for bone; when meat was scarce, 4 chs. of dahi were issued instead of the 2 chs. ordinary animal food.
			14½ 14½	One pound of wheaten flour daily, boiled as a porridge and seasoned with salt, to be given in two meals.	Alipore Jail ... { 2 chs. of rice extra were given as in previous years to some of the labouring prisoners.
			14½ 14½	For Bengalis, Assamese, Ooryas, and other rice-feeding people:—	Chittagong Jail... { To Europeans the following diet is given under special sanction of Government:—

				Is the same as the labouring scales, except that only half of the quantity of rice is given.
				EUROPEAN'S CELL DIET.
				Milk ... 8 Oz.	Mozufferpore Jail { The morning scale of diet was issued in the evening and the evening scale in the morning on the medical officer's recommendation.
				Bread ... 8	The standard dietary No. 2 scale was reduced by 1 ch.atta in the morning and 1 ch. rice in the evening from the 17th to the 21st June during the cholera outbreak, as in the medical officer's opinion the food was more than the prisoners were accustomed to in their homes and more than they could digest. From the 1st to 31st November the quantity of oil allowed by scale was also reduced in proportion to the capabilities of the prisoners, as the latter are unaccustomed to such a plentiful supply of fatty matter, and bowel complaints were prevalent.
				Soojoo ... 4	Durbhunga Jail {
				Sugar ... 1½	4 chs. of dahi were given instead of 2 chs. of meat.
				Meat with bone, uncooked ... 8	The allowance of salt was increased to ½ chs. with each meal instead of ¼, and an increased allowance of vegetables from the jail garden was given from March on the recommendation of the medical officer, as the prisoners were anemic.
				Vegetables ... 8	Sarun Jail ... {
				Salt ... ½	Bhagnipore Central Jail ... {
					Hazareebagh Central Jail ... {
					Lohardugga ... {
					A milk diet for prisoners suffering from scorbutic symptoms and anæmia was given in the Midnapore, Russa, Baraset, Mymensingh, Backergunge, Chittagong, Chumparun, Rungpore, Julpigoree, and Gya Jails on the recommendation of the Surgeon-General.

H. BEVERLEY,
 Offg. Inspector-General of Jails, Bengal.

JAILS.

CALCUTTA, THE 27TH DECEMBER 1877.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

Administration Report of the Jail Department for 1876.

Read again—

The Reports for 1873, 1874, and 1875, and the Resolutions recorded upon them.

THE Officiating Inspector-General ascribes the great delay which has taken place in the submission of this report to the pressure thrown upon all jail offices by the extraordinary releases and remissions on the occasion of the Imperial Proclamation of the 1st January, and by the introduction during the current year of the revised registers and returns prescribed by the new Jail Code. This explanation is hardly satisfactory. The releases took place on the first day of the current year, and most of the work connected with them should have been completed before the event. In neither case are the reasons alleged sufficient, in Mr. Eden's opinion, to account for the very great delay noticed by the Inspector-General in the opening paragraph of his report. Greater punctuality in the submission of annual reports by the Superintendents of Jails must be insisted on by the head of the department. In future reports the dates on which correct annual returns are received in the Inspector-General's Office should be specified. Mr. Eden believes that jails are now burdened with much clerical labour which might well be dispensed with, that they are called upon to fill up returns and statements with details which can never be of any practical use, and that their time for real work is diminished by the necessity of attending to the preparation of these useless forms; but it will of course be undesirable to undertake a revision of the forms of registers and returns prescribed by the Jail Code until the proposals of the Prison Conference have been disposed of.

2. The total number of persons in confinement on the 31st December 1876 was 21,264, against 21,265 on the last day of the previous year, and 19,683, the average for the years 1871-74. The number of civil prisoners admitted during the year shows an increase of 200 on 1875. The number in jail on the last day of each year was 155 and 134 respectively. The admissions of under-trial prisoners were 34,743, against 34,430. Mr. Beverley, however, points out that, while only 1,719 persons are shown to have been admitted by transfer, the number transferred is given as 3,663. It appears that this great discrepancy is chiefly due to error in the record of admissions to jail, under-trial prisoners received from kajuts and lock-ups being sometimes, in the absence of any intimation to this effect, entered as admissions instead of as transfers, and thus appearing twice under the former head. Some error of this nature appears from the returns to have occurred in previous years, though not to the extent reported for 1876. Under this explanation it appears that the number of under-trial prisoners admitted during the past year was really less than in 1875 or the previous years. The figures stand thus—

1871-74	33,051
1875	33,186
1876	32,799

3. The number of convicts admitted was larger than in any year since 1866, with the exception of 1874, which was also a year of scarcity. The increase corresponds almost exactly with the increase in the number of persons committed to prison in default of security for good conduct. This subject has separately received the attention of Government. The total number of convicts in confinement on the last day of the year 1876 was 19,850. Of these, however, 3,000 were specially released the next day; so that the current year opened with a smaller number of convicts than any year since 1871.

4. The number of offenders judicially sentenced to whipping during the year was 3,017, of whom 360 had been previously convicted. Of those flogged, 329 were under sixteen years of age and 49 over 50. The number of very petty punishments of this nature inflicted is not satisfactory. Whipping has no doubt a demoralizing effect on the offender subjected to it, and it tends to lessen his self-respect and to render him callous. It is only as a preventive, and as, in some cases, likely to inflict less moral injury on the prisoner than confinement among criminals, that it should be resorted to. The Lieutenant-Governor observes that for first offences 65 persons were punished with less than 5 stripes and 475 with less than 10; for a second or subsequent offence, one received less than 5, 12 less than 10, and 83 less than 15. Of 353 persons who were sentenced to imprisonment as well as to whipping, no less than 82 are said to have received this double punishment for their first offence. This point requires further elucidation. The law nowhere permits of whipping in addition to other punishment for a first offence. It has been ascertained that one of the headings in a jail return form which has been in use for some years is incorrect, and it is possible that the jail authorities have thus been led to enter cases in which both whipping and imprisonment have been awarded, as "first offences," owing to the Magistrate's omission to note the fact of previous convictions in the warrant. Such a palpable error, however, should have been detected long ago; and the Lieutenant-Governor desires that a report showing the correct explanation of the apparent illegality may be submitted. The number of prisoners under sixteen years of age admitted to jails during the year was 471, against 413 in 1875 and 535 in 1874. Every effort is being made to complete the arrangements for the reception of youthful offenders in the proposed Reformatory School at Alipore; the works are approaching completion, and the Lieutenant-Governor hopes that the institution will be opened early in the ensuing year.

5. The table of re-convictions among prisoners admitted to jail during the year shows a proportion of 11·1 per cent., against 9·7 per cent. in 1875. The actual numbers of re-convictions recorded during the past five years have been 1,377 in 1872, 1,695 in 1873, 2,757 in 1874, 3,075 in 1875, and 3,714 in 1876. It thus appears that more attention is being paid to this important subject. Still the Lieutenant-Governor agrees with Mr. Beverley in thinking that all the re-convictions that really occur are not recorded. This subject has received attention during the year, and instructions have been issued with the view of facilitating the proof of previous convictions in neighbouring sub-divisions or districts. The Lieutenant-Governor has had to remark in the Resolution on the annual police report, on the very insufficient punishments inflicted by some Magistrates on prisoners proved before them to have been habitual offenders, and further information has been called for. For the purposes of jail administration and statistics the Lieutenant-Governor would only consider a conviction for a specific offence falling under the same general head (against the State, against the person, or against property) as a previous conviction. In respect of the record of re-convictions the returns from the Dacca, Mymensingh, Purneah, Shahabad, Dinagepore, Bogra, and Julpigoree jails are still very unsatisfactory.

6. On the subject of the length of sentences Mr. Beverley gives some statistics to show that sentences for three years and upwards are steadily decreasing, while the number of convicts is increasing. In connection with the subject of central jail accommodation it would be interesting to know if sentences for terms between two and three years show a similar decrease. The average length of time for which under-trial prisoners were detained in jails was 16.77 days, against 15.41 in 1875. In Moorshedabad, Backergunge, and Singbhoom jails the average period exceeded 30 days. In the absence of explanation the Lieutenant-Governor considers this unsatisfactory. Among lock-ups the average was excessive in Jamtara, Contai, and Bhubbah. Altogether 26 under-trial prisoners and 27 convicts escaped and evaded recapture. The number of convicts released on appeal was 1,473, or 3.7 per cent. of the total imprisoned on conviction. As a provincial average this is not unsatisfactory. The percentage from Chittagong, however, (12.1) was very high. The number of executions was 66 against 58.3, the average of the past 12 years. Altogether 539 prisoners earned a remission of a part of their sentences under the mark rules by good conduct; six were set at large under special orders of Government; one was discharged on account of old age and two in consequence of incurable blindness; and 36 short term prisoners were released under Rule 297 of the old Jail Code on account of dangerous illness.

7. In paragraph 25 of the report, the unsatisfactory condition and management of the lock-ups throughout the province is brought prominently to notice. The maintenance of these lock-ups costs the Government not less than a lakh of rupees per annum, whilst the cost of each prisoner confined in them is more than double that of a prisoner in a district jail. This is a very unsatisfactory state of things. The Lieutenant-Governor requests that Dr. Lethbridge will submit a special report on the management of these subdivisional jails, showing whether their number and their expenditure cannot be reduced. Mr. Beverley points out that, under existing orders of Government, no statistics are given in several of the tabulated statements regarding prisoners who serve out the whole of their sentence in lock-ups. These numbered about 5,300 during the past year. At the same time the inclusion of some statistics regarding lock-ups renders an accurate survey of the statistics of jails somewhat difficult. The Lieutenant-Governor is not prepared to say that lock-up statistics should be abandoned. He would include them as heretofore in the tabular statements; they should be very much simplified, and should be treated of in a separate chapter of the report.

8. Owing to the large number of prisoners released on the 1st January, the closing figures of the year are of no practical value in considering the question of jail accommodation. Allowing for hospitals and punishment cells, the gross capacity of the jails of Bengal, on the scale of 36 superficial feet and 500 cubic feet per man, may be roughly stated as—

Central jails	9,250
District	11,500
Total				20,750

The gross number of convicts in jail in June 1877 was 17,223. It is clear, therefore, that at present we have more than sufficient accommodation for the prisoners now in jail, or likely for a long time to be in jail. The point to which Mr. Beverley principally addresses himself is the necessity for the provision of further central jail accommodation if prisoners sentenced for terms exceeding one year are to be confined in, central jails. The Lieutenant-Governor has recently decided to alter for the present the rule laid down in the Code, and to leave prisoners sentenced to less than two years in district jails, so long as there is no room for them in the central jails. Strict adherence to the rule would involve not only a large increase to the number or capacity of our central jails, but also a serious sacrifice of the accommodation already available in district prisons. According to the table given in the report, there were in June 1877 9,812 convicts in district and 7,292 in central jails, each class of jail being thus considerably under its capacity. There were 1,293 short-term prisoners in central jails, but this is owing to the circumstance that some of the central jails are also district jails, and must therefore receive local convicts. There was still in June last a large number of long-term prisoners in district jails, but it is stated that there are now very few. The Lieutenant-Governor, however, wishes to have half-yearly returns showing the number of long-term prisoners in each district jail and the cause of their detention. The statement now supplied does not distinguish between prisoners sentenced for two years and those sentenced for a longer term; but it is understood that the existing central jails are capable of accommodating all the latter, and, so long as this is the case, there will be no pressing necessity for further space. Meanwhile, the Lieutenant-Governor has, on independent grounds, decided on enlarging the Bhagulpore jail, and a scheme for the construction of a central jail at Dacca for the eastern districts is under consideration. In connection with this subject, however, the Inspector-General's attention is invited to the detailed Statement XV appended to the report. It is there shown that the daily average number of convicts in the central jails of Midnapore, Hazareebagh, Bhagulpore, and Buxar during the past year was 1,600 under their capacity.

9. The total sum expended in jails and lock-up buildings during the year was Rs. 1,51,792, of which Rs. 44,006 was devoted to repairs and Rs. 1,07,786 to the construction of new works. There can be no doubt that some district jails are such only in name. They consist simply of a cluster of badly constructed and insecure huts, where it is most difficult to enforce discipline or to carry out jail regulations. Under the rules which have now been drawn up for the utilization of convict labour in the construction of jail buildings under the general professional guidance of the Public Works Department, it will be possible to erect substantial buildings at a moderate cost, and much of the delay which has hitherto so often occurred in carrying out petty improvements will be obviated.

10. There were 134 escapes during the year—76 from jails and 58 from lock-ups. The average of the ten previous years was 157·8. It is explained, moreover, that 15 of the cases which occurred during the past year took place, not from jail, but from the custody of the police while on transit. The returns for the past year show some improvement in this respect, but there is still evidence of gross and inexcusable carelessness in many of the cases. Thus 29 prisoners found it possible not alone to break out of a masonry ward, but afterwards to scale the wall of the prison. No less than 10 under-trial prisoners succeeded in accomplishing this feat in one night in the Rajshahye jail. On that occasion the escape was not owing to any cunningly devised scheme on the part of the prisoners, but to the remarkable facilities afforded by the neglect on the part of the jail officials of the most ordinary caution. Careless searching had enabled the prisoners to smuggle large nails into the jail; the warders slept while the nails were used in forcing the locks; and the prisoners, walking out of the ward, found a bamboo and a rope, with which they were enabled to scale the wall with ease. In 11 other cases the prisoners simply walked through the open gate of the jail. If the rules were attended to, such escapes ought to be impossible. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that such occurrences reflect much discredit on all concerned, and can only be the result of most lax and inefficient management. During his inspection of jails in the past year, the Lieutenant-Governor has had frequent occasion to point out the number of bamboos and ropes left carelessly lying about the interior of jails. The analysis given of the circumstances connected with each escape shows that 36 cases occurred outside, and 87 from the inside, of the jail or lock-up, while in 11 cases the point from which the escape was effected is unknown. Mr. Beverley considers that the jail establishment was in fault in 26 cases, and the police in 97, while they were both to blame in 11. At present there are 10 jails guarded by a warder watch and 39 guarded by police : from the former there were 11 escapes, and from the latter 59. From 28 lock-ups guarded by warders there were 6 escapes, and from 57 guarded by police there were 43. The Lieutenant-Governor has recently sanctioned a scheme for the selection and training of apprentice warders in central jails for duty in such district jails as may be removed from the charge of the police. All central jails will be officered and guarded by trained prison servants, a small police guard being retained at the main gate as a reserve in case of organized disturbance, and this system will be extended gradually to the most securely constructed of the district jails.

11. The Lieutenant-Governor is not surprised to find that the attempt to carry out the present system of classification has been a failure. The general plan of the buildings and manufactory requirements of Indian jails are such that elaborate and technical systems of classification, hastily adopted from countries where the conditions of the criminal classes are very different from those existing in this country, have in Bengal and elsewhere proved impracticable. The Lieutenant-Governor is not prepared to sanction a large expenditure of money on alterations in existing jails for a system which, besides being unintelligible to the officers required to work it, is not likely to contribute either to increased discipline or moral reformation. What is wanted is in the first place complete isolation for prisoners of the following classes: juveniles, under-trial, and civil prisoners. After this has been effected, the jail should, if possible, be provided with proper means for segregating all habituals and prisoners who have been more than once in jail from those who have been convicted for the first time. Once separated, the former should be debarred from promotion to the posts of prison officers and kept to the hardest form of labour available in jail. If this system were carried out properly, it would contribute to the more strict management and perhaps reformation of habituals, and would deter ordinary prisoners from returning to jail.

12. The Lieutenant-Governor concurs in the Inspector-General's remarks regarding the condition of discipline in district jails and the standard which Superintendents should endeavour to attain. The error of looking solely to the labour test is responsible for much that is unsatisfactory in this respect, though, no doubt, in the absence of other means of testing the extent to which the prisoners have been kept to their work, the labour test is extremely useful. It is all-important that the necessity of subordination and the strictest obedience to rules should be constantly kept in view. The experience of some jails shows that a complete system of discipline may be enforced without any sacrifice of efficiency or profit. Nearly 20 per cent. of the total number of effective convicts were employed as prison officers and servants, and 53 per cent. were employed on manufactures; the remainder were occupied in the jail gardens, in extramural labour, or in building operations. Penal labour was not exacted from the full number of prisoners liable to that form of employment, owing to a deficiency in the appliances in some jails. This should be remedied as soon as possible. The larger jails show an improvement in respect of manufactures. The principles which are kept in view are the reduction of the number of petty manufactures and the selection for each large jail of some special industry suited to its particular circumstances and surroundings. At Bhagulpore the manufacture of woollen goods, and at Midnapore the preparation of coir and of oil, have been selected as the staple industries. The Inspector-General draws attention to the difficulty which will be experienced in providing profitable labour for the prisoners in district jails as soon as the transfer of long-term prisoners to central jails has been fully carried out. He justly remarks that it is in most cases impossible to make a short-term convict proficient in any form of profitable labour during the currency of his sentence. It is to be remarked, however, that, under the recent provisional amendment of the Jail Code, prisoners sentenced to terms extending up to two years will remain in district jails. The Lieutenant-Governor is quite ready to admit that for the shorter term prisoners those forms of labour only should be adopted which can be measured, and in which the full prescribed task can be strictly enforced. No apprenticeship is required to enable a prisoner to turn out a full day's task at the oil-mill. This is a form of labour which can be provided in every jail and lock-up, and it is generally profitable. The material is always procurable and oil is always saleable. The labour, too, is probably more efficient than any other form of labour, and Mr. Eden wishes to see more use made of it. It will also be found profitable to employ prisoners in the smaller district jails in the construction of more substantial buildings, in the erection of surrounding walls, or on drainage works and similar improvements. The conduct of prisoners generally was fairly satisfactory. The number employed as convict overseers during the year was 1,373, of whom only 133 were punished. Altogether 9,096 prisoners were eligible for marks for good conduct; of these, one-half earned marks at the rate of no less than 40 out of a maximum of 48. The number who were released during the year, having obtained a remission of their sentences under these rules, was 539, against 360 in the previous year. It is very important that the full scope of this system should be thoroughly understood by Jail Superintendents, and that it should not degenerate into a system of rewarding favourite prisoners by subordinate officials of the jail. The Lieutenant-Governor regrets to hear that several instances of imperfect knowledge and of negligence in the administration of these rules came to the notice of the Inspector-General during the year. This would not probably have been the case if, during the last few years, the jails had been more frequently inspected.

13. The number of punishments inflicted on convicts by the criminal courts was 64 against 42 in the previous year, and 17,654 were punished by jail officers against 17,870. The percentage in each year of total punishments to the average number of convicts in jail was 89.21 and 91.35 respectively. The Lieutenant-Governor agrees with Mr. Beverley in holding that paucity of punishments is not necessarily a sign of good discipline. Without punishments it is impossible to expect that those who have defied the law can be reduced to a condition of complete discipline and subordination to control. The best managed jails show a high average of punishments, while, with rare exceptions, discipline is reported as lax in those where the average is small. The numerical test, however, is not always in itself a safe guide. Thus, in Jessore jail, which shows the highest ratio for the year, it was found that the punishments, though so very numerous, were so light as to be practically ineffectual. Corporal punishment was inflicted in 2,370 cases, against 2,973 in 1875 and 4,143 in 1874. The decrease under this head is satisfactory. The number punished with solitary confinement was 748, against 936 in 1875 and 1,225 in 1874. In explanation of this apparent decrease, it is stated that there was apparently some confusion in the returns for 1875 between cases of reduced diet only and reduced diet in cells, several jails which have no separate cells showing the latter form of punishment. It is obvious that the infliction of penal diet without seclusion of the offender is almost impracticable. A large number of solitary cells have recently been provided; and, whatever may be the cause of the divergence between the returns for the two years, it is unsatisfactory to find that this form of punishment is not more used where the appliances are available.

14. Exclusive of manufacturing charges, the expenditure of the Jail Department during the year amounted to Rs. 11,16,740, against Rs. 11,00,667 in 1875. Though there was thus an absolute increase of Rs. 16,073, the number of prisoners in confinement being larger than in the previous year, the average cost was only Rs. 51-2-11, against Rs. 51-7-9.

15. The details of expenditure show an increase under every head except supervision and clothing. Under the former head the decrease was chiefly due to greater economy in the employment of extra establishment. Under clothing the average cost fell from Rs. 3-7-6 in 1875 to Rs. 2-14-6. Though greater economy appears to have been generally practised, the charges were very much above the average in the Pubna, Maldah, and Sarun jails. Under the head of rations the average cost was less, and under hospital charges greater, than in the previous year. With the exception of fish, all the principal articles of diet were cheaper than in 1875. Much has been done to reduce the cost of food by the adoption of such measures as the purchase of stocks at harvest time and the preparation of the raw material by jail labour. But it is evident that the general average cost is capable of still further reduction by careful revision of the charges in some jails. There can be no good reason why the food of each prisoner should cost Rs. 24 in Bankoora, when Midnapore can feed its prisoners for Rs. 21 each: why the charge should be only Rs. 21 in Moorshedabad and Rs. 18 in Nya Doomka, and yet Rs. 25 in Beerbhoom; Rs. 26 in the Presidency Jail and Rs. 28 a mile off in the Alipore Jail; Rs. 22 in Nuddea and Rs. 31 in Jessore; Rs. 13 in Maldah and Rs. 22 in Rajshahye; Rs. 21 in Bogra, Rs. 25 in Rungpore, and Rs. 40 in Julpigoree; Rs. 22 in Noakholly and Rs. 31 in Chittagong; Rs. 16 in Singbhoom, Rs. 21 in Manbhoom, and Rs. 28 in Lohardugga. Quite as striking divergences are noticeable under "hospital charges." In Bankoora the daily average number of sick was 4.89 and the total cost was Rs. 184, while in Beerbhoom the average was 10.55 and the cost was only Rs. 114. In Nuddea it cost only Rs. 124 for 13.15 sick per diem; in Jessore the charges for a daily average of 7.91 amounted to Rs. 275. Hazareebagh treated a daily average of 52.82 for Rs. 750; yet in Rajshahye, with a daily average of 20.71, the gross charge was Rs. 701, and Dinagepore, with 11.56, or little more than one-fifth of the Hazareebagh average, spent Rs. 584. Nya Doomka and Maldah had 1.46 and 1.94 respectively; yet the hospital charges in the former jail were more than seven times those in the latter. Singbhoom treated 8.41 patients a day for Rs. 183, while Lohardugga spent Rs. 179 on 6.16. The Inspector-General attributes these inequalities partly to the fact that some Superintendents entered as hospital charges the whole of the prisoner's diet while in hospital, instead of the extra diet only. But this can hardly be a correct explanation, as nearly all the jails in which the average cost is particularly low under hospital charges are also remarkable for economy in ration charges. The whole subject of expenditure under these two heads and under that of clothing demands careful attention. It ought to be possible to lay down a scale for each jail suited to its peculiar circumstances, its salubrity or otherwise, and the ordinary cost of the staples of food in the neighbourhood. The apparently excessive cost of rations in lock-ups must be the result of insufficient supervision by the sub-divisional officers. The Inspector-General should at once report the most striking cases to the Commissioners of divisions. The charges on account of police guards require further elucidation. They are excessively high in Beerbhoom, Nuddea, Tipperah, Bogra, Pooree, and Singbhoom. It is of course true, as stated by Mr. Beverley, that in small and insecure jails, such as Singbhoom, the average charge must necessarily be comparatively high. But there seems no reason why the charges in Beerbhoom, Nuddea, and Tipperah should be so much higher than those of jails of similar size and construction. There was a gross increase of Rs. 6,080 under the head of contingencies, and the average cost per prisoner on this account rose from Rs. 2-15-8 to Rs. 3-3-2. This is attributed chiefly to the large number of prisoners transferred during the year. The importance of carefully checking this, perhaps the most elastic of all charges, has not been lost sight of, and the attention of Superintendents has been especially directed to the subject. There is reason to believe that there has been much extravagance in this class of expenditure, particularly in the disbursement of so-called travelling and subsistence allowance to discharged prisoners. Under recent orders, the rule in the Jail Code on this subject has been amended, so as to restrict the grant of these allowances to cases of actual necessity.

16. The charges for the year on account of manufactures amounted to Rs. 6,20,700, against Rs. 5,52,100, and the profit was Rs. 1,93,900, against Rs. 1,91,600. The explanation offered is that there was a large decrease (Rs. 62,400) in the credits received for manufactured goods supplied to Government. It appears that the operations connected with the preparation of food, such as husking grain and the like, were in many jails conducted by means of convict labour during the year. The value of the labour thus expended is not charged on articles consumed in the same jail. This explanation, however, appears to be insufficient, the reduction in the cost of rations being very small in comparison with the sum to be accounted for. The cash receipts for articles sold show a decrease of Rs. 55,500, but this is accounted for by the large realizations in 1875 on account of articles manufactured in previous years. It is quite true, as remarked in the report, that Superintendents often experience a difficulty in finding a market for manufactured goods; but, with judicious management, this is a state of things which need not be chronic in any jail which is situated fairly near any great line of communication. More attention should be paid to the selection of articles for manufacture for which there is a local demand, such as oil. The jails which had the largest stores of manufactured goods on hand at the close of the year were Hooghly, Presidency, Dinagapore, Rajshahye, Dacca, and Purneah, and every one of these was in the same predicament on the first day of the year. Unless actually unsaleable articles are manufactured, there appears to be no good reason whatever why the Dacca, Presidency, and Hooghly jails at least should not find a ready market for their goods. No particulars are given in explanation of the somewhat unsatisfactory balance-sheet of the Alipore jail. The excess of outturn over expenditure is given as Rs. 84,700 against Rs. 81,300 in the previous year. The cash profit, including sums realized for goods manufactured in previous years, was Rs. 1,32,600, against

Rs. 1,91,900. The jails in which the highest profits in proportion to the number of effectives were earned were Alipore, Presidency, Russa, and Darjeeling. In Mozufferpore, Durbhunga, Buxar, Hazareebagh, and Chumparun it was slight, and in the three last named inappreciable. As regards Buxar and Hazareebagh, this is doubtless owing to the employment of the prisoners chiefly on building. No explanation is offered of the poor outturn in Chumparun. There was a loss in Bankoora jail of Rs. 41, in Rungpore of Rs. 541, and in Hooghly of Rs. 4,396, and the explanations offered are unsatisfactory. In Hooghly, it is reported, stock which was overvalued in other years was sold at an apparent loss. The amount of outstanding bills is very high in the Hooghly, Presidency, Alipore, Rajshahye, Rungpore, and Shahabad jails, and must be at once reduced. On the whole, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks that much more might and should be done to develop profitable manufactures in the district jails. As might be expected, the aggregate profits from lock-ups was very small. Something, however, can clearly be done in this direction if sub-divisional officers take a proper interest in the matter, and if simple industries, such as oil-pressing, are generally introduced and properly supervised. Eleven lock-ups made a loss upon their manufactures. No explanation has been supplied to the Inspector-General, except in regard of Dowlut Khan, where the loss was caused by the cyclone. The Alipore Jail Press has formed the subject of special inquiry, and it has been determined to remove it from the Alipore Jail and concentrate the printing work in the Presidency Jail in such a manner as to enable the jail department to do most of the printing of the Government of Bengal.

17. The tables of comparative sickness and mortality in the Bengal jails and lock-ups show that, in respect of general unhealthiness, the famine year of 1866 stands first on the list with 5.45 per cent. of daily average sick, while 1870 stands last with 3.35. The death-rate varied from 10.70 in 1866 to 4.00 in 1871. The average mortality was 5.89 per cent., of which one per cent. was contributed by cholera. The past year was above the average in mortality from cholera and slightly below it in general mortality. The percentages were 1.2 and 5.73 respectively. The death-rate from cholera was considerably higher than in any year since 1866. Six jails are mentioned as having had no death from cholera (Russa, Baraset, Rungpore, Bogra, Pooree, and Singbhoom). Statement XVI, however, shows that no less than ten other jails (Midnapore, Presidency, Alipore, Nuddea, Maldah, Darjeeling, Tipperah, Monghyr, Purneah, and Doomka) were entirely free from mortality from this cause. Cholera was most fatal in Julpigoree (10.52), Lohardugga (6.52), Sarun (6.21), Pubna (5.89), and Chumparun (4.83). Sarun and Lohardugga are ordinarily fairly healthy jails. If deaths from cholera are excluded, the ten most unhealthy jails stand in the following order:—Rungpore, Julpigoree, Chumparun, Backergunge, Singbhoom, Pubna, Pooree, Baraset, Hazareebagh, and Bogra. The unhealthiness of Singbhoom, Pubna, Pooree, and Hazareebagh during the year was exceptional. In the Surgeon-General's report some remarks are extracted from the report of the Superintendent of the Pubna jail, to the effect that the wards are damp and ill-ventilated, and generally to some extent overcrowded; these, however, are causes which did not operate for the first time during the year. But the Lieutenant-Governor has sought in vain in both the Inspector-General's and the Surgeon-General's report for any explanation of the circumstances which led to the unusual mortality in Singbhoom, Pooree, and Hazareebagh. The Lieutenant-Governor hopes before long to see the Pubna, Chumparun, and Singbhoom jails enlarged and improved by prison labour. With few exceptions, among which the central jails of Midnapore, Buxar, Bhagulpore, and Hazareebagh have been already noticed, every jail was more or less overcrowded at some time or other during the year. This was the case with nearly all the jails which proved most unhealthy, notably Rungpore, Chumparun, Bubna, Patna, Mozufferpore, and Bogra. Among the comparatively healthy jails Bankoora, Alipore, Jessore, Maldah, Dacca, and Tipperah were also greatly overcrowded. This is a point which has been very incompletely dealt with in the Surgeon-General's report. Dr. Beatson, in the divisional survey which forms the early part of his report, omits to notice the remarkable overcrowding of the Bankoora, Jessore, Rungpore, and Tipperah jails, and, from the tenour of his remarks, clearly considers the accommodation afforded by them sufficient. As regards the Manbhoom Jail, the Lieutenant-Governor cannot reconcile the remarks found in one portion of the Surgeon-General's report that "the prisoners were very favourably circumstanced in regard to capacity and ventilation," with the statement which is made a little further on, and which is perfectly correct, that overcrowding was very marked in the Rungpore, Jessore, and Manbhoom jails. The exceedingly high death-rate among female prisoners is dismissed with a reference to the remarks made in last year's report. Those remarks were to the effect that the hygienic conditions under which the women are placed in the jails showing the highest mortality are deserving of thorough investigation. The fact is, however, that the number of female prisoners is so very small that an accident may cause the death-rate to appear exceptionally high. Thus the mortality among females per cent. of mean strength was 72.99 (not 92.99 as stated by Dr. Beatson) in the Hooghly jail; but the daily average number of female convicts in the jail was only 1.37. The jails with the next highest mortality are Chittagong (36.29), Backergunge (32.89), and Julpigoree (29.24); but the daily average numbers of female convicts were only 5.51, 3.04, and 3.42 respectively. Only one woman died in Hooghly, Backergunge, and Julpigoree, and two in Chittagong. The Lieutenant-Governor will be glad if Dr. Lethbridge will give his special attention to this subject; but, so far as can be judged from the statistics which have been supplied, it appears to Mr. Eden that the mortality among females follows pretty closely that of males. Of the ten jails which show the highest death-rate among females, six appear among the ten most unhealthy in the province. The unhealthiness of Rungpore jail is undoubtedly largely owing to overcrowding and insufficient drainage; of Julpigoree to fault of site; and of Backergunge to defects in construction. Orders for the construction of new jails at Rungpore and Backergunge have already issued, and the Lieutenant-Governor has decided to employ the prisoners of the former jail largely on a comprehensive scheme for draining the whole station, which has been taken up by the Municipality and Road Cess Committee, and which, it is hoped, will materially improve the sanitary condition of the town and jail. The jail at Julpigoree has been abandoned, and estimates for the erection of temporary buildings, pending the selection of a new site, have been sanctioned by Government. At the same time the Lieutenant-Governor fears that for some time at least a high death-rate in Rungpore and Julpigoree jails at least must be accepted as a necessity owing to the low rate of vitality which prevails among the poorer classes in those districts.

18. The question of the manner in which the duties of inspection have been performed during the past five years by the Head of the Department has already been specially dealt with. The Lieutenant-Governor found that no less than nine jails had been left uninspected for five years or more, and six for four years. In more than one jail which Mr. Eden has himself visited, he has seen ample proof of the evil effects of such systematic neglect. Mr. Beverley himself only assumed charge of the Department in the latter half of 1876, and he has since devoted a considerable time to the inspection of jails. The remarks recorded by him, however, chiefly refer to jails inspected during the current year, and must be reproduced in the next report. Arrangements will shortly be made which will provide for the annual inspection of every jail in the province. In Burdwan, Baraset, Moorshedabad, Julpigoree, Gya, Chumparun, and Cuttack the Magistrates appear to have attended very insufficiently to the duty of visiting the jail. The Lieutenant-Governor has taken note of the names of the officers who are favourably mentioned by the Inspector-General. Mr. Eden desires to thank Mr. Beverley for the interesting report which he has submitted this year.
